Continued from Page 1 semester," he said. "A $10 increase in the general use fee will result in graduate students paying an extra $90 a semester. I don't think an extra $90 will have a big impact on most graduate students."

Dr. Ray Bowen, A&M president, changed the proposal Tuesday to a $10 increase. The original proposed increase would have added $14 per semester credit hour in fiscal year 1995-96, and $6 per semester credit hour in fiscal year 1996-97.

Dr. Dan H. Robertson, director of graduate studies, said he was initially concerned that the increase in the general use fee would increase the total cost of graduate studies and that some graduate students may have to drop out of the University.

"Some graduate students are at or near a point of destitution, and others are not," he said. "Anytime the cost goes up, the increase will hurt those students who are living pretty sparse to begin with and have to rely on all sorts of financial aid and loans.

"The number of students who will be priced out of the market may be offset by the part of the general use fee increase that will go toward financial aid."

However, Moore said the GSC is also concerned about graduate students' access to the $800,000 that would be set aside for student financial aid and is working to make sure money is equally available to them.

To offset any increase in the general use fee, the University will fund payment for some graduate teaching assistants. "I believe there are some excellent graduate teaching assistants," Robertson said. "I am pleased that there will be funds available to reward them. It would be if any outstanding faculty member was rewarded."
