'Bama officials see crimson

Alabama's sentencing includes three years on probation, no bowl game in 1996 and 11 fewer scholarships.

TUSCALOOSA, Ala. (AP) — The NCAA put Alabama's football program on three years' probation Wednesday, banning the Crimson Tide from the postseason for one year and making them forfeit 11 games in 1993 for using an ineligible player.

Alabama was not banned from TV appearances, but will lose perhaps two dozen or more scholarships over the three years.

The NCAA cited the Tide football program, which has never been on probation during decades of prominence including six national championships, with exhibiting "a distressing failure of institutional control."

A statement released by the NCAA said Alabama was censured for three chief reasons:

—A player obtained from boosters six impermissible deferred-payment loans totaling $24,400, during 1989 and 1990. The player, Gene Jelks, completed his career in the fall of 1989. The NCAA said he never repaid the loans.

—Antonio Langham was allowed to play in 11 regular season games in 1993 even though he had signed with an agent and athletic officials were aware that a potential violation of rules had occurred.

—The school's faculty athletics representative provided "false and misleading information" to the NCAA.

of four scholarships for 1995-96, which Alabama already has given up voluntarily, plus four more for 1996-97, along with 13 from the initial number allowed in 1996-97 and nine from the initial number in 1997-98.

It wasn't immediately clear how many lost scholarships might be involved. The forfeiture of games puts an ugly asterisk on the Tide's record book. The 1993 team went 8-2-1 during the games Langham played and 9-3-1 including the two games after he was declared ineligible.

With the forfeits, Alabama's record would be 1-12, the worst since 1955.

"Am I anxious to get it behind us? I am. Has it been a distraction? It has," Stallings said before the announcement. "What I do not want it to be is an excuse for us to play poorly."

The investigation began three years ago with Jelks' pay-for-play allegations. Eventually it uncovered improper loans to Jelks and mishandling of Langham's signing with an agent, Darryl Dennis of Washington, D.C.

Jelks' accusations that he received money and gifts to sign with Alabama in 1985 did not hold up during the probe. But loans Jelks received from 1989 and May 1990 showed up in an NCAA letter of inquiry in September 1994.

The NCAA also found out that Langham, a top defensive back, signed with a sports agent on Jan. 2, 1993, the morning after the Crimson Tide won the national championship by beating Miami in the Sugar Bowl.

Langham quickly decided against going pro before his senior season and mentioned the meeting to Stallings, who got Langham's name taken off the NFL draft. Then Langham was allowed to play 11 games before the agent began speaking up and Alabama declared him ineligible.

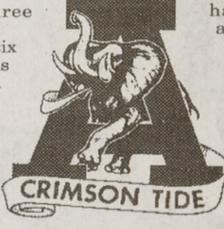

The NCAA said Wednesday that if Alabama had acted more aggressively to find out and report what Langham had done, the matter might not have grown into "a major infractions case before the NCAA Committee on Infractions."

Langham sat out the Southeastern Conference championship game, a 28-13 loss to Florida, and the Gator Bowl, in which Alabama beat North Carolina 24-10.

No names were given in the NCAA release, but Jelks, whose play-for-pay claims kicked off the probe, was listed in previous documents for receiving improper help from boosters. Langham admitted signing with an agent after the 1993 Sugar Bowl when Alabama won a national title, then tried to get out of it and was allowed to play.

According to NCAA documents, Langham told coach Gene Stallings something about the signing, and Stallings conferred with athletic director Hootie Ingram, but the NCAA was not alerted until the season was almost over.

The sanctions against Alabama call for the loss

Several cancerous spots were found on his right lung.

DALLAS (AP) — Unless Mickey Mantle's doctors are set to perform further cancer surgery, the baseball great probably has less than a year to live, a research doctor says.

Mantle's doctors at Baylor University Medical Center discovered several cancerous spots on the former New York Yankee's right lung during a routine follow-up exam to his June 8 liver transplant.

"If they do not (operate to remove the lung tumors), the prognosis is not very extended. It would be a year — maybe," said Dr. Isaac Djerassi, a research oncologist at Mercy Catholic Medical Center in Philadelphia. Djerassi said the drugs needed to keep his body from rejecting his new liver would also mean he cannot reject the new tumors and fight the cancer.

He suggested removing the tumors and giving Mantle "aggressive" chemotherapy and radiation treatments.

Dr. Goran Klintmalm, director of the Baylor transplant program, said "we do not believe there is a place for surgery" in Mantle's case.

He would not give a prognosis for Mantle's survival, but said the center has treated other patients who have developed cancer after a transplant.

"We have some patients that have not survived more than a year and we have some patients eight years out," he said.

Mantle's cancer is a potentially aggressive form known as a hepatoma. It can easily recur in his new liver or migrate, because even after a transplant, cancerous cells can remain in a recipient's blood and lymphatic system, experts say.

While Mantle's doctors were planning aggressive chemotherapy treatments on the 63-year-old Hall of Famer, they warned Mantle there was a chance the newfound cancer could spread.

Dr. Robert Goldstein, Mantle's transplant surgeon, said "we are treating this very aggressively and we are hopeful."

Bagwell's sub helps Astros blast Cardinals

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Mike Simms, subbing for the injured Jeff Bagwell at first base, homered and drove in two runs as the Houston Astros defeated the St. Louis Cardinals 4-2 Wednesday night.

Houston has won 14 of its last 20 and 21 of 31. St. Louis has dropped a season-high six straight.

Simms hit his first home run since Sept. 9, 1992. He also doubled and drove in a run with a sacrifice fly while taking the place of Bagwell, who broke his hand.

Shane Reynolds (7-6) allowed two runs on six hits, walked none and recorded six strikeouts in six innings as he won for the fifth time in his last six decisions.

Scott Cooper, 6-for-37 since the All-Star break, went 1-for-3 and drove home both of the Cardinals' runs.

St. Louis starter Donovan Osborne (0-4) got the loss.

The win allowed the Astros to remain four games behind the Cincinnati Reds in the National League Central Division.

WILLIAMS: Teams on the move

an economic standpoint.

If the city of Dallas builds the proposed $141 million arena to replace Reunion Arena, it will be keeping the NBA's Mavericks and NHL's Stars from moving to a suburb like Louisville, Ky. or Arlington.

Donald Carter, owner of the Mavericks and Sidekicks, said he might consider building a new arena on some land he owns outside of Louisville if the city of Dallas doesn't get its act together.

It gives me chills to think of the Mavericks in Louisville. Such a move would be devastating to Dallas' economy.

However, a new arena would have the opposite effect. Sports franchises bring in revenue from sources outside the market they play in.

Most of this money comes in the form of media rights, licensing and sponsorship and nothing could be finer than outside cash flowing into a city.

When cities build new sports facilities, they bring in even more money. Just look at the Texas Rangers. As bad as they've always been, they still manage to pull in more than a million people each year.

Last year, with the opening of The BallPark at Arlington, the Rangers were on a pace to draw more than two million in attendance before the strike ended the season.

New arenas and stadiums are also the only way to host the major sporting events. If Dallas ever wants to host another NBA All-Star Game or NCAA Final Four, then it is faced with the fact that it will have to build a new arena.

Jerry Jones, owner and general manager of the Dallas Cowboys, wants to modify Texas Stadium. He plans to add a retractable roof as well as remove the AstroTurf and replace it with natural grass.

Jones' ultimate goal is obvious. He wants to bring a Super Bowl to Dallas and knows this is the quickest way to do it.

Owners usually do everything for their own personal gain. But by building new facilities, they are ultimately giving back to the community. Surprise, surprise.
