United Nations considers retaliating against Serbs

The U.S. peace initiative hangs in the balance of the decision of how to react to Monday's bombing.

SARAJEVO, Bosnia-Herzegovina (AP) — The United Nations struggled Tuesday with one of the most delicate decisions in its long Bosnian mission: how to punish rebel Serbs for massacring dozens of Sarajevans without derailing a new U.S. peace initiative.

Sending NATO warplanes or using the new U.N. rapid reaction force to retaliate for Monday's mortar attack near a crowded Sarajevo marketplace would alienate the Serbs, who must make concessions for any deal to work.

But a weak response to the slaughter of 37 people threatened to send Bosnian government negotiators packing. President Alija Izetbegovic, in Paris for talks with French and U.S. officials, said he was "under pressure by Bosnian public opinion to withdraw" his negotiators.

Washington was urging its allies to take military action. "The Bosnian Serbs must be held accountable," State Department spokesman Nicholas Burns said.

The U.S. Navy said the aircraft carrier USS Theodore Roosevelt was diverted Tuesday to the Adriatic Sea at the request of Adm. Leighton Smith, commander of NATO forces in southern Europe.

At the site of Monday's blast, a simple wooden table overflowed with flowers. A one-line message, crudely wrapped in plastic against the rain, said it was "the last salute to cherished Sarajevans."
