SOLDIERS Sketch

In 1975, Graves read an article about two American airmen who were released from a Russian prison camp.

They reported there were other POWs in the camp.

This article gave Graves hope that Lackey might still be alive.

Graves said he has been in touch with Lackey's son who also believes that his father is alive.

Lackey's son has a report saying that two Greek fishermen had seen the plane crash and reported that a Russian trawler had lifted two men out of a raft and taken them on board.

Graves ended his speech with a quote from Winston Churchill.

"You must never give up," he said, "never, never, never give up."

Cadet Maj. Lorelei Gomez, Arnold Air Society commander and a senior community health major, said the society invited these speakers because they were former students who had done a lot of research on the subject of POW/MIA.

Rashel Mikulec, a junior biomedical science major, is a member of Angel Flight.

She said she is a member because it is a great way to show support to the members of Arnold Air Society and the Corps of Cadets in general.

"A lot of people don't realize what POW/MIA week is," Mikulec said.

"These people made sacrifices for all of us, not just the military."

Jennifer Taylor is the Angel Flight commander and a sophomore business administration major.

"We are very behind the Corps program and do many things with Arnold Air Society, community service wise," said Taylor.

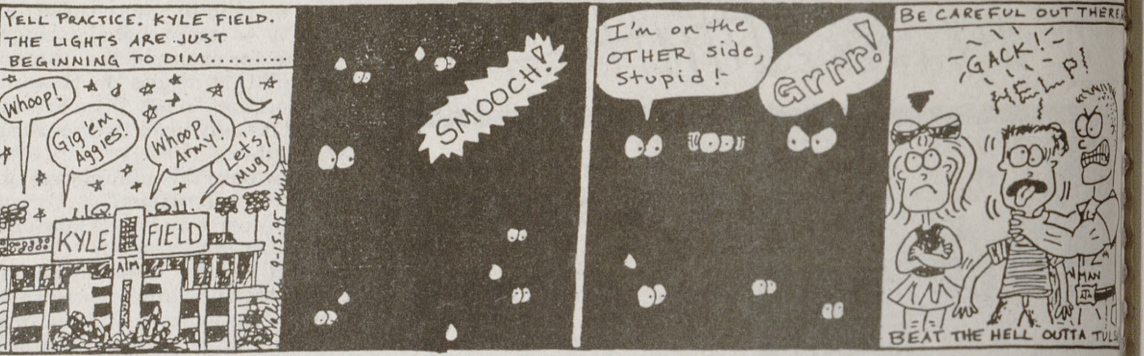

All three women said they want to stress that this is not just a military program. There are a lot of people involved who have no ties to the military, but they want to help.

They also said part of the purpose of this week is to raise awareness about POWs and MIAs.

The Corps of Cadets, Arnold Air Society and Angel Flight are all wearing yellow ribbons this week to show their support for those who are missing.
