Series of NFL injuries

Colorado's Koy Detmer is the latest star to suffer a turf-related injury.

For once, football players should be heard, and they're saying "Get rid of artificial turf," said wide receiver Michael Irvin. "Why go through all these studies and listen to doctors when football players are telling you they

Jerry Jones signed cornerback Kevin Smith to a four-year, $11 million contract, which included a $4 million signing bonus. The next day, in the Cowboys' opener, Smith's season ended. He torn an Achilles' tendon in a non-contact play at Giants Stadium while defending a pass. In the second week of the season, at the Astrodome, the Houston Oilers lost linebacker

Robertson for the season or non-contact plays.

One of the nation's top collegiate quarterbacks, Koy Detmer of Colorado, faces possible season-ending knee surgery atter an injury Saturday against Texas A&M that was attributed. uted to artificial turf.

"AstroTurf is absolutely hor rible," Irvin said. "It will make me retire, I'm sure, a little ear lier than I should.

Jones has said for years he favors a natural grass surface, but says he hasn't found the right type of grass that grows well at Texas Stadium, which is enclosed except for the hole

The Cowboys are built around speed, Jones said, and he doesn't want to lose that advantage when witching to natural grass

He said he's concerned whether a grass field can hold up under inclement weather cond tions late in the season, when high school teams play at Texas Stadium and other non-football activities such as concerts are close," Etchberger said. "This year, I want it pretty bad. They take three individual spots after the teams that make it. They take into account the whole sea son, so there is still a chance."

Hinze said he has been thrilled by the performances of freshman runners Scott Lenge feld and Amy Stanberry. Lenge feld placed third at UTSA and Vanderbilt while Stanberry finished 11th at UTSA and seventh at Vanderbilt. They have been the most pleasant of surprises," Hinze said. "They have come in and handled everything I've asked them to do. Etchberger said she is looking forward to the meet this week end for variety. "It will be good for us to go against some different schools," Etchberger said. "It's so boring running against the same schools.
