

GRANTS: Bowen proposed offsetting the fee increase impact

because some students would have been out of luck and might have had to leave school," Boenig said.

Dr. J. Malon Southerland, vice president for student affairs, said the idea was generated by Dr. Ray Bowen, A&M president, and other administrators when they were discussing the fee increase.

"[Bowen] felt it was necessary to offset the impact of the fee increase by awarding grants through financial aid," Southerland said.

"Thousands of dollars were spent to reduce the burden on students."

The grants were awarded on a need basis, which was split into three categories. The categories were no family contribution; $1-2,100 worth of family contributions and $2,100 worth of family contributions and above.

Students were placed in a need category, and funds were distributed. Undergraduates received 85 percent of the funds; graduate students received 11 percent; and professional school students received 4 percent.

The total fund allotment was $110-140 per undergraduate students, $70-90 per graduate student and $120-150 per professional school student.
