Roxanne causes heavy property damage in Mexico

Forecasters continue to keep an eye on the tropical storm.

VILLAHERMOSA, Mexico (AP) — Tropical Storm Roxanne, once a powerful hurricane, was petering out Wednesday after flooding much of Mexico's Gulf coast and damaging the area's banana and cattle business.

Forecasters, however, were keeping a wary eye on the erratic storm.

"This storm has been driving us crazy," said Tricia Wallace, a staff meteorologist at the U.S. National Hurricane Center in Miami. "The storm has been breaking up ... but we'll keep watching."

The Mexican government lifted tropical storm warnings for the entire gulf coast at 11 a.m. EDT, but slapped them back at 4 p.m. EDT for a stretch of coastline from Tuxpan northward to San Fernando. Roxanne was last reported drifting west, was located at 10 p.m. EDT about 150 miles west of Tampico, Mexico. Sustained winds were about 40 mph.

U.S. Coast Guard and Mexican helicopters continued searching for three people still believed missing from a petroleum work-barge that was hit Sunday night with 245 people on board. Five people were killed.

On Wednesday, officials said three fishermen from Brownsville, Texas, were rescued from a small reef where they had wrecked during the hurricane. The fishermen set out from Brownsville Oct. 11 and were headed for Belize.

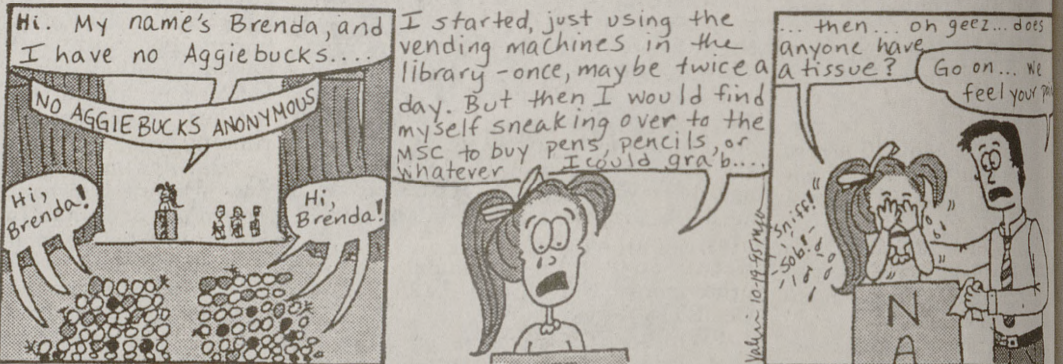

They apparently blew onto the low reef Cayos Arcas two or three days later, said Oscar Best, the acting port captain of Ciudad del Carmen. Best identified them as Manuel Cuevas, Livar, Juan de Dios Ponce and Adalberto Ponce.
