Five die as commuter train slams into school bus

□ Federal investigators are looking into reports of a malfunctioning signal light that may have caused the crash.

FOX RIVER GROVE, Ill. (AP) — A commuter train ripped apart a school bus stopped on the tracks Wednesday as youngsters in the back rushed forward in terror at the sight of 620 tons of steel bearing down on them. Five students were killed and about 30 injured.

day they were looking into reports of a malfunctioning signal light that may have led to the fatal crash. The town's police chief happened to witness the crash because he was checking out recent reports of problems with the signal.

Some witnesses said the bus was trying to cross the tracks about 7:20 a.m. when it got caught at a red light behind a car and couldn't make it all the way across. But others said there was no car ahead and the driver could have moved forward.

The signal light that may have malfunctioned is supposed to turn green when a train is approaching to let vehicles clear the track, said John Goglia of the National Transportation Safety Board.

The bus was taking the youngsters to 1,400-student Cary-Grove High School in Cary. The Chicago-bound express train was traveling between 50 and 60 mph and sheared the body of the bus off the chassis, spinning it around 180 degrees.

"From then on out, all you heard was screaming," said Andrea Arens, 19, who was waiting for another train in this bedroom community nearly 40 miles north-west of Chicago, in a fast-growing commuter corridor at the edge of the city's suburban sprawl.

sentence for anyone."

Losch pointed to Shamburger's decision to turn himself over to police, when he could have continued to kill more people, as a sign that he knew his actions were wrong and would not commit them again.

"There are people in our society who are habitual offenders," he said. "In spite of punishment, they still commit crimes. Surely, they're more blameworthy than people like Ron Shamburger, who have never been seriously punished in their lives."

Vanessa Muldrow, Brazos County assistant district attorney, said Shamburger's confession and surrender were calculated moves and his several thefts proved he would be a continuous threat to society.

"What Ron Shamburger has shown to us is an escalating pattern of violence," Muldrow said. "The answer to question one (whether Shamburger would pose a future threat to society) is clearly a yes. This defendant is a threat."

Bill Turner, Brazos County district attorney, said the defense's arguments about Shamburger's character and morals were not relevant to his punishment.

"Does being good in the Boy Scouts reduce somebody's responsibility and blameworthiness in this society?" he said.

The prosecution's arguments won out, resulting in a death penalty sentence.

Shamburger's formal sentencing Friday 8 a.m. by 361st District Judge Carolyn Ruffino.

HANDGUN

under the law to prohibit handguns.

"What you have is a conflict of rights," he said. "Individuals and businesses have the right to restrict who can and can't be on their property."

Burdett said criminals may read the signs prohibiting handguns, too.

"If someone wants to steal some money, they know where the pickings are easiest," he said. "I think people should wait and see first how this works out."

Wiatt said there are many places where concealed handguns cannot be taken, including businesses in which over 50 percent of total sales are alcohol purchases, schools of any kind, sporting facilities and correctional institutes.

Ogden said most people will not carry weapons with them wherever they go, just in certain situations.

"A lot of Texans want the permit so that they can carry the concealed handgun with them in their cars," he said.

Burdett said the right to carry a weapon is not a license to use it in all situations.

"A gun is a tool," he said. "But the most important tool for protecting society is between your ears."

Wiatt said police officers will act differently once the law takes effect, but he is trying to teach them not to overreact in routine situations like traffic stops.

"They're thinking, 'Now everybody has a gun,'" he said. "We're trying to educate them."

Permit holders must also learn to deal with officers, Wiatt said.

"If a police officer stops you and he asks for your driver's license, you are obliged to show your license," he said.

Wiatt said people with permits should act responsibly and not consider themselves above the law.

"That licensee has the responsibility to train," he said. "And be aware that stress and fear and anger is going to lead to the possibility of bad decisions."

Anyone with a permit who uses a handgun for self defense must still appear before a grand jury to justify their actions, Wiatt said.
