pull to within 49-41 at the intermission.

But, the Aggies weren't in the mood to mess around in the second half. After trading baskets with Lamar in the opening minutes, A&M used another 11-0 run to take control of the game 70-52.

Branch said beating Lamar's full-court press was the key to A&M's second half uprising.

"They were giving us a hard time with their press," Branch said. "To beat it, we used a sideline break and that seemed to work for us. We didn't even have to run an offense after that."

After going up 87-67 with 6:45 left in the game, you could have called the A&M offense the Angel Spinks Show. The senior center led the way down the stretch, scoring 16 of her career-high 29 points as the Aggies thrilled the crowd with their record scoring performance.

Spinks said A&M's aggressive attack in the second half opened things up for her.

"It was just transition of fense," Spinks said. "We were getting the ball in quick, sprinting the floor and the guards were throwing the ball ahead. That makes it easier to post-up against someone who's smaller and you don't have to run an offense."

A&M broke the century mark with 3:45 remaining and never looked back. When all was said and done, the Aggies had outscored Lamar 62-42 in the second half. Branch and Tucker finished with 16 points each while Marianne Sevin contributed 14 points and 10 rebounds.

A&M returns to action on Friday, hosting Duke University in the second round at G.

Rollie White Coliseum. The Blue Devils defeated Virginia Commonwealth 93-51 in North Carolina.

A&M will host the game by virtue of its drawing a larger home crowd than Duke in Wednesday's first-round match-ups.

"It's a great opportunity for us," Harvey said. "Duke is a quality team that is ranked anywhere from 15 to 20 in the preseason polls."

"They have an opportunity to come here to G. Rollie and face these rowdy Aggies."

"They are a very physical team and we remember that from last year."

King jury rehearses some testimony

□ The reading of testimony keeps jury busy but they are still without a verdict.

NEW YORK (AP) — The jury deciding whether boxing promoter Don King committed insurance fraud rehearsed testimony Wednesday in which an accountant accused his former boss of directing him to make up a business expense.

The reading of that testimony and some from other witnesses in the six-week trial kept the jury busy for a third day without a verdict as it considered nine wire fraud charges against the flamboyant promoter who controls some of boxing's biggest names.

The testimony from Joseph Maffia bolstered the prosecution's argument that King instructed others to tell Lloyd's of London he had paid $350,000 in training expenses to Julio Cesar Chavez for a 1991 bout that was cancelled.

Prosecutors allege King put language into a fake contract to make it appear that he had paid $350,000 in training expenses to Chavez for a fight with Harold Brazier.

The cancellation of the fight would then qualify King for the expenses he had paid to boxers as long as the expenses could not be recovered by the promoter.

In fact, Chavez testified, he was never paid $350,000 for expenses and was never told King recovered that amount of money with an insurance policy. That testimony also was read back to the jury Wednesday.

So far, the jury has not asked to have any of King's testimony read back.

During three days on the witness stand, King said he knew nothing about the $350,000 claim and had not discussed it in depth with Maffia. He conceded the $350,000 was a "made up" figure.

Maffia's testimony was tainted because he was a disgruntled ex-employee who believed he was fired from the company in September 1991, although King said he left on his own.

King also had accused him of stealing from the company before the Chavez-Brazier bout was canceled.

King's lawyer, Peter Fleming Jr., played a tape for the jury during the trial in which Maffia is heard cursing King and vowing to hurt him.

Prosecutors said in their closing arguments everything Maffia testified about against King was supported by documents or other testimony.

If convicted, King could face up to five years in prison and $250,000 in fines for each count.

The jury began deliberations Monday and deliberated Wednesday for about six hours before going home. Deliberations are to resume Thursday.

Burleson must forfeit seven games

□ Burleson will miss the playoffs because of an ineligible player.

AUSTIN (AP) — The University Interscholastic League State Executive Committee ruled Wednesday that Burleson must forfeit its seven victories and miss the Class 5A Division II playoffs because of an ineligible player.

Attorneys for Burleson said they would seek a court injunction to block the committee's 2-1 ruling and allow the school to compete in the playoffs.

The District 6-5A Executive Committee ruled Monday that defensive end Daniel Reese wasn't a resident of Burleson.

"We didn't do anything illegal," coach Mark Saunders said. "It was interpreted however it was interpreted, and so be it."

Saunders filed the appeal with the UIL. If Burleson (7-3) is denied entry into the playoffs, Hurst Bell (4-6) will replace it against undefeated Flower Mound Marcus, ranked No. 4.

Reese's parents own a house in Cleburne, where he used to attend school, and a mobile home in Burleson. Dana Skiles, Reese's mother, says she and her son live in Burleson and her husband and daughter live in Cleburne.

Reese was not going to be allowed to play for Cleburne this season because of disciplinary problems, but Cleburne coach Dennis Parker signed a release stating the boy wasn't transferring for football reasons.

Bell had been eliminated from the playoff race with a 14-10 loss to Burleson two weeks ago. Neither Bell nor Burleson participated in the 5-0 vote by the District 6-5A Executive Committee to require the forfeits.

Lakers beat hapless Mavericks

□ Jamal Mashburn led the Mavericks with 32 points, despite the loss.

INGLEWOOD, Calif. (AP) — Cedric Ceballos had 31 points and 13 rebounds to help the Los Angeles Lakers remain undefeated at home with a 114-97 victory Wednesday night over the Dallas Mavericks.

The Lakers, who played five of their first seven games on the road and lost their first four, controlled the game from the opening period in improving to 3-0 at home and 4-4 overall.

The Mavericks entered the game atop the Midwest Division, but dropped to third after Utah and Houston each won Wednesday to take over the top two spots.

Jamal Mashburn led the Mavericks with 32 points, and nearly brought them all the way back from a 20-point halftime deficit with 15 points in a five-minute span of the third period. But Dallas never got closer than 88-78 on a basket by Mashburn with 10:14 remaining in the game.

Los Angeles has won 15 of its last 17 meetings with the Mavericks dating to the 1991-92 season, and Dallas hasn't won at the Forum since Dec. 12, 1990.

Anthony Peeler added 25 points and Elden Campbell 22 for the Lakers.

Mashburn helped erase a 60-40 halftime deficit by scoring 15 points in the first five minutes of the third period. He capped the hot streak with a 3-pointer that drew the Mavericks to 67-57 with 7:08 remaining.

They got as close as 71-66 when Jason Kidd scored five straight points, Popeye Jones sank two free throws and Mashburn added a jumper.

Then the replacement referees called Peeler for a flagrant foul against Kidd, who knocked into Peeler going up for a layup and landed hard on his side under the basket.
