Adams inks Nashville deal

If all stipulations are met, the Houston Oilers will move in 1998.

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — While Houston Oilers owner Bud Adams signed a deal Thursday to move his team here by 1998, his general manager was in Memphis checking out the possibility of playing there next fall.

The 50-page document that lays out the $292 million deal includes a provision that the city will help find an interim stadium if the Oilers buy out the two years remaining on their Astrodome lease.

"As a lame duck team, I would hope we could work something out," Adams said after the signing ceremony at Nashville's Metro Courthouse.

He said Memphis and its Liberty Bowl Memorial Stadium, where the team has played two preseason games, would be his preferred site, and that Oilers GM Floyd Reese was heading there. Adams said he has not talked to Astrodome officials about breaking the lease.

"This is all exploratory," said Pepper Rodgers, general manager partner of the CFL's Memphis Mad Dogs, who would have to allow the Oilers to play at the Liberty Bowl.

"Floyd and I talked. He said he was coming incognito and then Bud spilled it on TV. I'll have to call Bud up and say this is not the way it's done," Rodgers said by telephone, chuckling.

The NFL said it is evaluating the proposed move and that commissioner Paul Tagliabue would make a full written report to the league membership after completing his review of the situation.

Adams spent several minutes during the ceremony talking about his loyalty and what he considers to be "binding."

His true intentions regarding Nashville had been questioned because of a 1987 flirtation with relocation to Florida that resulted in a $70 million improvement to the Astrodome.

Last year, Adams asked Houston to build him a stadium, but the mayor refused to use taxpayer money.

Under the deal with Nashville, the city will build a 65,000-seat open-air stadium, and Nashville Mayor Phil Bredesen said it will be done without raising taxes.

Adams said he has lived in Houston 50 years, including more than 44 in the same house. Most of his employees have been with him at least a decade and the Oilers have been in that city for 36 years.

"My proudest accomplishment is that I have kissed the same woman every night for 49 years. I won't say it's a record, but it's quite a while,"

Adams said.

"When Bud Adams tells you we will come, if you live up to your end of the bargain, that's binding."

Bredesen, a millionaire businessman, said the Oilers organization is one of few where the people are so reliable.

"Bud Adams is somebody who I trust," Bredesen said. "He has done everything he said he would do in this process."

This is the second proposed franchise shift in less than two weeks. On Nov. 6, Browns owner Art Modell signed a deal to move his team from Cleveland to Baltimore.

Two other teams relocated before this season — the Rams from Los Angeles to St. Louis and the Raiders from Los Angeles to Oakland.

The NFL shuffle made many Nashvillians nervous that Adams might leave soon after moving here.

But Bredesen said he would face substantial penalties, including the threat of an injunction and financial responsibility for the stadium bonds, if he tries to leave before the 30-year agreement ends.

NFL on the move

Houston Oilers owner Bud Adams signed a deal to move his team to Nashville beginning in 1998, becoming the fourth NFL team to relocate in 1995. The Oilers have played in Houston since 1960.

Other recent NFL franchise moves:

1995	Cleveland Browns to Baltimore	1988	St. Louis Cardinals to Phoenix
	L.A. Raiders to Oakland	1984	Baltimore Colts to Indianapolis
	L.A. Rams to St. Louis	1982	Oakland Raiders to Los Angeles

Virtual Ags win vs. "scab" team, 70-38

Kyle Bryant nailed 10 straight extra points.

Bizarre, truly bizarre. That is the only description that can truly encompass the course of events that the virtual Aggies took this week as the Middle Tennessee State Blue Raiders underwent a hellish attempt to make it to College Station.

They never showed up, accidentally buying airline tickets from defunct Braniff Airlines.

In a desperate attempt to reconcile with R.C. Slocum, Head Coach Boots Donnelly called his friend, the coach of the University of Pacific.

Donnelly convinced Pacific to take the Blue Raiders' place at Kyle Field on Saturday.

The Aggies crushed poor Pacific 70-38, exploding for 719 yards of total offense while holding UP to -81 yards rushing.

Nothing on the Aggies' offense failed to click during the game. Senior quarterback Corey Pullig completed 19-of-40 passes for 509 yards and six touchdowns.

Wide receiver Danny McCray had another stellar performance with nine catches for 316 yards.

Virtual tailback Leeland McElroy continued his runaway quest for the Heisman Trophy, compiling 193 yards on a mere 10 carries.

The Aggies' "Wrecking Crew" defense, despite giving up 38 points recorded 10 sacks and broke up eight passes.

As usual, placekicker Kyle Bryant was exceptional — nailing 10 extra points to run his consecutive made streak to 47.

A&M remained No. 2 in the nation with the win. Two wins left separate the team from its ultimate dream — a match-up with the Nebraska in the Fiesta Bowl ... for the national championship.

Horry hunts down Bucks

The Rockets' small forward scored a career-high 40 points including eight 3-pointers.

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Robert Horry made up for Clyde Drexler's absence with a career-high 40 points in the Houston Rockets' 115-87 rout of the Milwaukee Bucks on Thursday night.

One night after giving Houston a 96-93 victory over Toronto to win a 3-pointer at the buzzer — his only basket of the game — Horry hit eight 3-pointers against the Bucks, including five in the second half.

One of them, just before the third-period buzzer, put the Rockets ahead 94-67.

That basket broke his previous career high of 30 points, set against Sacramento on April 14, 1994.

Horry was 16-of-26 one night after a 1-for-5 shooting performance. His eighth 3-pointer gave the Rockets a 107-82 lead with six minutes left.

Hakeem Olajuwon added 24 points and 12 rebounds as Houston won its fourth consecutive game.

Mario Elie had 14 points while starting in place of Drexler, who sat out with a bruised and swollen right knee, which he banged Wednesday night against the Raptors.

Drexler is averaging 17.5 points, 5.7 rebounds and five assists this season.

Glenn Robinson led the Bucks with 24 points.

Eric Murdock added 19 and Vin Baker had 16 points and 12 rebounds.

Olajuwon and Horry each had 19 points in the first half, when the Rockets turned over the ball just once on their way to a 61-44 lead.

Olajuwon scored 11 and Horry added 10 in a 21-6 first-quarter run.

Horry broke open the game early by scoring five points in an 11-0 run that gave Houston a 38-26 lead just four minutes into the second period.

The Bucks never got closer than seven points after that.

Lady Ag practice brings up "glory days"

LISA NANCE
SPORTSWRITER

As I walked on to the basketball court at G. Rollie White Coliseum earlier this week to do some interviews with the women's basketball team, I was greeted by that familiar smell. You know, that old gym smell that always manages to conjure up memories of my own basketball "glory" days

(high school, of course). And as I stood there and watched the players warm up, I realized how much I miss playing the game.

So I viewed the team practice for a while, and the constant thump of the ball bouncing on the hard wood floor took me off into a daydream.

There I was on the court shooting around knowing at any minute the whistle would blow to start practice, and the running would begin.

Then I was seeing the hardwood while running the ball down on a fast break.

I shot. I scored. I was there on defense making the blocks and rebounds.

We had won and once again I was the high scorer for the team.

Unfortunately, there is not much credit to be gained at the junior varsity level.

Even more unfortunate is the fact that my basketball "career" peaked when I was a sophomore.

In fact, after my sophomore year my basketball "career" consisted of sitting on the bench and hearing "Nance — Nance (there were two of us, I have a twin sister who was just as bad as I was) get in there!" with eight seconds left in the game.

I could feel my face turn red with humiliation as I stood there and pleaded with my coach: "Please don't make me go in, I don't want to go in."

(My feeling was that I'd rather not play at all than go in for eight seconds.)

"Hey you! Do you mind getting out of our way?"

And where is it that you don't want to go?"

I was brought back to reality by Lisa Branch. It seems like I was in the way of some drill the team was wanting to run.

As I walked off the court, I was suddenly relieved that I had only been daydreaming, and I realized that maybe I don't miss the game as much as I thought.
