worried abou

get or even getting to the

Kidd, who rookie of the [ill, was voted

Conference

. 11 game at will be two of

Eastern Con-d by Jordan's

Scottie Pip-

orward spot, le O'Neal at

ee Hardaway

e East team

he Bulls' Phil

will be Kidd tle's Shawn

I, and Hous-

awon at cen-

der at shoot-arl of Seattle

ah will coach

ch is deter erence's best lay's games.

leading vote-

ern Confer

3,195, 27,866

ets

kets on eclipsed in career

n 10-for-23

sn't nearly he Rockets eir fourth

Olajuwon

ice joining

a dismal

e 3-for-18

e Bullets scoring a nts in the ton led by 93-62 enle only 21 opening shington, sank 10 of ts during points in de it 18-4, ilt its adading 37-ack to 49

six points

t put the oach wonder if nce to be a

he Eagles

hen owner

n to replace playing ca-

des was a

10 years

Francisco

rs won Sus in 1982,

989 and

2, he left to become nsive coor-

y for two ned to the them win

he followrter.

Aggie means than excellence.

pride themselves in being a part of something that is rich in history and strives for nothing less Aggies proudly display A&M stickers and license plates on the backs of their cars; Greeks paste on their crests. Aggies frequently wear A&M/TAMU/ATM shirts; Greeks often wear their letters. Aggies participate in traditions; Greeks participate in "Fraternity" means brother-hood; "sorority" means sisterhood. There is the same intense feeling of camaraderie at A&M

-just look at the Aggie Ring.

strangers approach one another feeling a common bond simply wrapped around their fingers. Why? Because they've experienced something which "from understood and "from the inside looking out" can't be explained. The same holds true

Those who condemn Greek life know little about it and are influenced by stereotypes and falsehoods. For some reason, there is this myth that Greeks aren't Aggies, but merely members of social organizations which party all the time. In the beer per capita, it's a little hypocritical to condemn any group city that consumes the most the outside looking in" can't be because gold pieces of metal are

Outside of Aggieland,

January 26, 1996

Does the Greek system belong on campus? Greeks bond through service

civiliza-

EFF

NOLEN

COLUMNIST

tion after which it

System causes

OPINION

all of these things social division belongs on the Texas ERIN A&M campus as much as the FITZGERALD Corps of Cadets. Anyone who COLUMNIST has a sense of what being an without joining a fraternal organization. Anyone of Texas A&M football, but it would agree that it shares many characteristics with being Greek. Just like Aggies, Greeks can also be a fan takes its name, the Greek system is not the means more when you're an Aggie. You're a part of something special. Of course, there are always some bad apples that are easy targets. But these mistakes celebration of individualism and accomplishment that it pretends to be. Despite the numerous claims of fraternities and sororities, their primary focus is social. Much are pure products of society lip service is given to com-Non-Greek Aggies have just munity service, academic as many (if not more) incienhancement and moral dents of hazing and can be standards. When it comes culturally insensitive. Just to recruitment, however, as paying players doesn't the social aspects of Greek life are flaunted the most.

for partying.
In fact, no bulk alcohol is allowed at Greek parties, and members are subjected to strict requirements on drinking and behavior. The National headquarters of each fraternity and sorority restrict their number of social events.

Let's look at some other facts about these "wild" Aggie Greeks:
• Academically, Greeks possess higher grade point ratios than non-Greeks on average.

· Greeks do more community service than most non-Greeks. Every Greek participates in community service a minimum of once a year. Along with national fraternal philanthropies, most have a local philanthropy Greeks also do local community service, such as Big Brother/Big Sister programs, visiting boys homes and nursing homes Adopt a Highway, and A&M's Big Event.

· Greeks are involved in almost every campus organization. In fact, many of the campus leaders are Greek, such as the speaker of the Senate, the president of the 12th Man Student Association and the Honors Student Council president. True, anyone can do and be less should get off their high horses and look at all Most often, Greeks are seen the good they bring to this campus and community. Greeks devote a large percentage of their time to service and studies And it takes a lot of character to live up to the standards of fraternal life. Perhaps that is why all but two presidents of the United States since 1823 have been Greek.

Greeks are superficial and worth-

If the pride in being Greek is still incomprehensible, Aggies should ask themselves why being an Aggie is so great — it's the same answer.

As for "renting a friend," it's called tuition.

Erin Fitzgerald is a senior political science and English major and a member of a sorority donning the garments that celebrate their more Dionysian enterprises. As a civilian, I am continually bombarded by clothing such as the "grab-a-date" and 'bastardize-this-culture" shirts. Rarely — in fact never — have I seen the "Upsilons fed the homeless" shirt.

Granted, many of the social events heralded by these articles of clothing actually serve a charitable purpose. Greeks are very good at holding golf tournaments, concerts and chili cook-offs that benefit charities. The unfortunate side effect of this is that it breeds two dangerous mentalities. One is that the idea of throwing money at a problem will solve it. The other being the concept that it's acceptable to help a charity as long as they can get a round of golf or a drunken romp around a pot of stew out of it.

Because Greek groups rarely claim to be primarily service-oriented, it would hardly be fair to criticize them for their lack of efficacy

Their social basis, on the other hand, is fair game. The Greek system is based on a division of people that is as ridiculous and arbitrary as Dr.

Seuss' star-bellied Sneetches. After a selection process which breeds homogeneous, rather than diverse groups, Greeks learn to identify with an organization that celebrates itself for the sole purpose of celebrating itself. This ideology espouses the idea that every Upsilon (Mu, Eta, etc.) should like his or her fellow brother or sister not because of the individual characteristics of that person, but because they are an Upsilon. The intangible quality of Up-silonhood is apparently available at a price of around $600 per semester. It varies depending on the selection of letters the individual Greek wants on his or her sweatshirt. The letters themselves don't stand for anything, but why should that matter?

Such capricious divisions of people exist outside the Greek system as well (especially at A&M), but that doesn't make them any more valid.

Of course, these faults lie within the Greek system itself, rather than the individuals involved. But along with the faults inherent in the system, the actions of many Greek groups have shown the human error involved. An in-dividual would have to go back in time as far as Monday to find an example of hazing in one of A&M's Greek organizations. Year after year, the Greek system has been a constant source of negative publicity for A&M, especially because of the fraternities. Were it not for such vigorous competition from the College Republicans, the Corps of Cadets and the Board of Regents, the Greek system would hold the title for "Most Embarrassing University Group.'

I am not suggesting that the Greek system has never done anything positive. Sororities and fraternities have raised thousands of dollars for charities. So have student groups like United Way, Habitat for Humanity and countless others. Only, the latter have managed to do it without ever stealing church playground equipment or breaking into the apartment of a police officer.

Have the "moral standards" and "community service" values preached by the Greek system had any effect on the actions of the numerous Greek members who have committed such transgressions? Obviously not.

Has the A&M Greek community given any evidence to suggest that the next twenty years will be any different? Not one iota.

Jeff Nolen is a senior psychology major

THE BATTALION

Established in 1893

Editorials appearing in The Battalion reflect the views of the editorials board. They do not necessarily reflect the opinions of other Battalion staff members, the Texas A&M student body, regents, administration, faculty or staff. Columns, guest columns, cartoons and letters express the opinions of the authors. Contact the opinion editor for information on submitting guest columns.

Editorials Board

Sterling Hayman

Stacy Stanton

Michael Landauer Opinion Editor Jason Brown

EDITORIAL

SECONDHAND

'Smoking in the board room' stinks of special privileges.

Smoke 'em if you got 'em — ban smoking. en if it goes against campus As Mobley stated, simply even if it goes against campus policy. At least that seems to be the attitude of some members of the Board of Regents.

Some of the regents, including Chairman Mary Nan West, have been smoking in their MSC offices despite the fact that doing so is in direct violation of campus policy.

Former Texas A&M president William H. Mobley inacted the policy in 1993, doing away with a smoking policy that allowed for designated areas of buildings to be used for smoking.

In a memo explaining the new policy, Mobley wrote, "Scientific findings, as summarized by the United States Attorney General and the Environmental Protection Agency, indicate that simple separation of buildings into "smoking" and "non-smoking" sections does not eliminate the unequivocal health risks that result from environmental tobacco smoke.'

These health risks still exist in offices in the MSC. Workers in offices near the regents' should not be victims of a selectively-enforced policy when the health risks

As the dangers of smoking have become more publicized, many smokers have dropped the habit. The dangers of sidestream smoke have caused restaurants, airlines and office buildings across the country to creating a "smoking" section is not good enough to protect nonsmokers' rights. Similarly, allowing one group, no matter how powerful and respected, to break the rules undermines the health of others.

Since the policy states that the ban exists for all buildings "under the administrative purview" of the president, the MSC is not an acceptable place for the regents to smoke.

This kind of blatant disregard of the rules reeks of the kind of behavior that led to the "ice and cups" scandal of 1994. Although law-enforcement will probably never get involved, the infractions are just as serious.

Aside from their clash with policy, the regents should abandon their indoor smoking habits simply out of consideration for others. The only enforcement in Mobley's policy was a call for consideration and thoughtfulness on the part of smokers, so it is ultimately left to the regents to alter their behavior.

If other smokers can live with smoking outdoors, so can the regents. The regents may have never been reprimanded, but students, faculty and staff members would never get away with smoking in the MSC

The regents have been caught with a smoking gun. They should put it out.

Several of my high school friends are also agnostic, Hindu, and Muslim. Additionally, since atheist roommate and gave met many friends and acquaintances who are atheist, agnostic, and even pagan. With all of these peo-ple, I have been able to debate constructively, and my own be-because of this.

liefs have clarified substantially

One of the greatest sins plaguing mankind is a profound ignorance of other philosophies and religions. Most wars throughout history have been caused by ignorance. The only way to solve the problem is through education, ina religious discussion becomes a more of the participants is intolerant and narrow-minded. Granted this is not uncommon, especially

It is also a well known fact that the more our opinions are challenged, the stronger they become. Besides, an intellectually stimulating debate is one of the at Texas A&M, but it is by no means universal.

fiery argument is when one or cluding philosophical debates, not by cowering in our self-imposed ignorance. The only way in which my arrival at A&M, I have had an

Votes should have strong foundations

I commend the editorial staff for presenting an unbiased account of the major philosophies of the two political parties while underscoring the need for voters to be informed about candidates' po sitions before they cast their ballots (editorial, Jan. 24).

Too many times I hear people say things without any reference to where they stand on the issues or values that truly define a presi dential candidate. Such statements should be backed up by reason and knowledge, not by uninformed prejudices. I have heard it said that people who do not vote have no reason to complain about government. I also believe people who vote ignorantly have no reason to either.

Political apathy in this nation is a huge problem, but there is actually a bigger concern to a representative democracy than citizens not voting, and that is citizens voting for candidates without knowing what, or who, they really stand for.

Class of '99

Zak Hall

Debating religion avoids ignorance

I was highly offended by Kieran Watson's column concerning the supposed "pointlessness" of philosophical discussions. I have found discussions of religion and philosophy to be both possible and very useful.

As a Christian with an agnostic father, I learned the skill of engaging in relaxed conversations about such topics rather than violent arguments.

best ways to recharge after a day of boring lectures and labs. Aaron McCarty

Class of '99

The Battalion encourages letters to the editor and will print as many as space allows. Letters must be 300 words or less and include the author's name, class, and phone number.

We reserve the right to edit letters for length, style, and accuracy. Letters may be submitted in person at 013 Reed McDon-ald. A valid student ID is required. Letters may also be mailed to:
The Battalion - Mail Call

013 Reed McDonald Texas A&M University College Station, TX 77843-1111

Fax: (409) 845-2647 E-mail: Batt@tamvm1.tamu.edu

6 p.m. 0 p.m.