

Grass fire burns out of control, destroys dozens of homes

At least 49 people were injured Thursday. Ninety buildings were destroyed or damaged.

POOLVILLE, (AP) — Linda Dixon stood ankle deep in the ashes Thursday looking for bits and pieces of her life. She was not having much luck. "There's nothing left. Nothing," she said, her face ruddy and covered with soot from digging in 90-degree heat.

Dixon's small wood-framed ranch home was one of 65 houses destroyed by raging grass fires that continued to spread Thursday in Parker and Wise counties, fueled by gusty winds and grass so dry from drought that it crackled beneath one's feet.

In all, some 16,000 acres had burned Thursday afternoon, down from earlier estimates, when firefighters had about 70 percent of the flames contained.

The grass fire near Poolville, 35 miles northwest of Fort Worth, injured at least 49 people, said Joe Clement, a spokesman for the Texas Department of Safety. Another 90 buildings and an equal number of vehicles were also destroyed or damaged, he said.

Unseasonably hot, windy and tinder-dry weather has been feeding fires across Texas. Gov. George W. Bush asked for a federal disaster declaration for the entire state.

Officials instituted a ban on outdoor burning across a fourth of the state. They also warned of automobiles sparking dry grass, motorists tossing cigarettes or matches, and arson.

Bush, who flew over Parker County to assess the damage, made state workers, National Guard helicopters and heavy equipment available to fight the blaze. He also mobilized a newly created fire-fighting task force to battle grass fires.

The Federal Emergency Management Agency gave Texas access to federal manpower and equipment as well as the potential for financial aid, FEMA's regional division director for response and recovery said. But no decision had been made on the request for an emergency disaster declaration, which would allow the federal government to pre-position firefighting equipment and crews across the state in preparation for other blazes possible in the dry heat, said Dell Greer, division director of FEMA's regional office in Denton.

"Our emphasis right now is on the immediate situation" in Poolville, he said. "I compare this to Vietnam," said Dallas firefighter Mike Barrett, who was among some 230 firefighters battling the blaze Thursday. "Those flames move through and it looks like Nepal. The fire is going 20 miles per hour."

Firefighters used small tanker trucks called "brush trucks" to maneuver through the stands of trees and to try to douse the flames.

"But those trucks can't go everywhere," Barrett said. "You use a shovel. A hoe. A broom. Whatever."
