"If he doesn't have it wrapped up, he's close," said Illinois Gov. Jim Edgar.

He urged others to clear the field: "There's no need to keep fighting among ourselves."

Forbes trailed everywhere and was focusing on the Thursday showdown in New York.

The returns looked like this: In Georgia, Dole had 41 percent, Buchanan 30 percent, Alexander 13 and Forbes 12.

The New England states were solid for Dole.

He was picking up 48 percent of the vote in Massachusetts, with Buchanan next at 25.

In Connecticut, Dole had 54 percent and Forbes 20 and Buchanan 15 percent. In Vermont, it was 41 percent for Dole, with Buchanan, Forbes and Lugar all in the teens.

In Maine, Dole had 46 percent, Buchanan 25. In Rhode Island, Dole had 67 percent and Alexander 20.

In Maryland, Dole had 53 percent and Buchanan 21. Colorado gave Dole 44 percent, Buchanan and Forbes both 21 percent.

"It's over," said one of Dole's lieutenants, New York Sen. Alfonse D'Amato.

Dole was looking ahead. "We need to get the party together and aim at Clinton," he told AP.

"So far, the guy has had a free ride while we beat each other up but that is about to change."

Across the states voting Tuesday, Dole cut into Buchanan's core support among religious right, very conservative, low-income and Ross Perot voters.

Dole supporters said beating Clinton and his experience in Washington were his most important qualities.
