When it comes to phenomenal career options, unmatched training opportunities and the chance to develop professional relationships that will last a lifetime – it's great to know that Price Waterhouse isn't just for accounting majors anymore. In Consulting, the doors are now open for BANA/MIS, Engineering, Business and Liberal Arts majors to receive the best training in the Consulting profession.

After four weeks of self-study in your home office, entry level Consultants travel to the Price Waterhouse Professional Development Center in Tampa, Florida for two and a half months of advanced instruction. The firm follows up with an average of 1,000 hours of additional training over the next four to six years. No other professional services firm provides this level of technical instruction to its Consultants.

What does it take to become a Consultant with Price Waterhouse? Like these new Consultants who will join the firm this summer, Price Waterhouse seeks analytical thinkers with a passion for creatively utilizing the power of Information Technology to enhance clients' competitiveness. While some programming training is useful, it is not essential. What matters most is the quality of your mind and the depth of your resourcefulness, as Price Waterhouse will provide the high-intensity training in all the skills you need to get started.
