OPINION

was important.

e to win

A&M's Forgotten Savior

hey wanted to close it down. A&M was in the red and in trouble, and the legislature wanted to scrap the whole shabang. Our friends in Austin were all set to incorporate the School of Agriculture into the t.u. system and simply board up the rest. Then along came one man ..

Governor Ross? Sure, we all know that story — I hear that representative still doesn't know what hit him. Yeah, Ross

General Rudder? Yep, he is probably most responsible for what the University is today.

But Ross' boots would go unpolished and Rudder might have been forced to attend one of the remedial military institutions if not for a man named Cushing.

maze" are synonyms. The only time I ever ventured into Cushing was to buy a

Coke in that fourth floor dead end — of course, every hall in the Cushing Library was a dead end. Col. Edward Benjamin Cushing's story, however,

The seal of Texas A&M

needs to be told.

ditions back then.

$1,000,000 today.

University says 1876

across the bottom. Cushing was already here. He was Class of '80 — I hear there were a lot fewer tra-

In the 1890s, Gov. Ross

ture, but it seemed to be worth

A&M, you see, was in debt to the tune of $87,000. That's about

That may not sound like much, but

it. I guess they hadn't yet heard of the "General Use Fee."

nsider the few options open to the school. Normally, when a public institution has lebt, the legislature either increases funding or finds someone to finance more cred-

nothing by the time Cushing came back in the 1910's.

had indeed saved A&M on the floor of the Texas Legisla

I know; around here, the words "Cushing" and "dusty

DAVID COLUMNIST

The ever-supportive legislature was willing to do neither.

Anyway, with no money and no way to get more, A&M was halfway down the road to oblivion — or to Austin, whichever way you want to look at it.

But in 1912, Cushing took over as chairman of TAMC's Board of Directors — now called the Board of Regents, and still without student representation ... but that's for another column.

Cushing personally guaranteed notes of credit, using his own assets as collateral. This bought enough time for the school to both regain stability and to begin a fundraising campaign.

In short, Cushing personally saved Texas A&M.

But wait, there's more ... When Old Main burned down, A&M's library went with it. In other words, TAMC went without a library for several years while the directors searched for money to build a Enter Cushing. Cushing's father had been a rare book dealer, and Cushing had expanded his own collection to include a huge number of books. In 1924, when Cushing died, he willed his entire collection to the College. In 1927, when the directors were finally able to build a new library, only one name would really fit. Unfortunately, none of Cushing's de scendants has attended A&M — or if they have, the archives don't know about it. That means few people have been around to really keep Cushing's memory alive. But this is Texas A&M, and we remember our own. When we bring our parents to College Station, we always show them Ross, Old Main and the 12th Man. We tell them about respect for traditions and for each other. Next time, add Cushing to the tour.

It's time to remember another man

David Taylor is a senior

THE BATTALION

Established in 1893

Editorials appearing in The Battalion reflect the views of the editorials board. They do not necessarily reflect the opinions of other Battalion staff members, the Texas A&M student body, regents, administration, faculty or staff. Columns, guest columns, cartoons and letters express the opinions of the authors. Contact the opinion editor for information on submitting guest columns.

Editorials Board

Sterling Hayman Stacy Stanton Michael Landauer Opinion Editor

Jason Brown

EDITORIAL

WHOOPSTOCK

Students should take this chance to show how Aggies can unite.

The KKK once challenged

A&M's unity, and unity won. In 1993, The Ku Klux Klan planned a rally in College Station. While protests were being planned, one group of stu-dents decided on a better plan of action. Instead of showing up to the rally to give the KKK the attention it thrives on, student groups were asked to participate in a newly created event, Whoopstock Unity Fest '93.

The festival was free to the public, offering local music and entertainment. The KKK came and went, but students at the time did not want the festival to be an isolated incident.

Before the event ever hap-ened, Ric Gonzalez, an MSC Black Awareness Committee member, told The Battalion he hoped to see the festival become a tradition. "This (The Klan rally) may be the reason to unify, but we need to keep it going and show we don't need a reason to come together," he said.

True to this wish, Whoopstock '96 will be going on at Simpson Drill Field from noon to 6 p.m. tomorrow.

The students and groups who have kept the festival alive deserve credit for their efforts. The best way to show our appreciation, however, is to participate.

In the wake of the recent affirmative action march, stu-dents should come together to show that political issues do not have to be completely divisive. "Diversity" is almost a dirty word on this campus, but Whoopstock allows stu-dents to celebrate the fact that the diverse can unite. The festival is the perfect example of how diversity thrives on unity, not division.

Whoopstock offers students the chance to see each other beyond their organizations, their ethnicity or even their Aggieness. It is a chance to celebrate differences.

Whoopstock is the student body's chance to make its mark on A&M. As past generations have left us the traditions of Muster, Silver Taps and Ele-phant Walk, this generation has a chance to continue something future Aggies will honor.

The KKK came and went at A&M, but even with all the challenges they bring, diversity and unity are welcome to stay.

It takes more than ost hate to make history

COLUMNIST

Booker T. Washington, W.E.B. DuBois, Marting Luther King, Jr., Malcolm X .. These are just a few of the greatest black leaders in history. Each of

ing to be harde

they recruit

girl in the n

hne," sophomoerg said. Th e more exper-

vill help them

have the

Aggies are

this weeken

s a solid effo

layers through nice if we eat round at

phomore J

We have a

igh, so hope

Il come thro

ry this week

win the Sou

he Lady Age

er the regi

ing among

mind, the l

rmined to p

nd to their

eve a bid to pionship in

they urge

out and supp complete the s a Southwe

uired tackle New England

d-round drai

gotten hours

played right

uring five sea

l, answers a

ed as the focu

being tight

n impress

ying abilit

istant cos

e. "He is cisco.

e champio

their contributions has positively impacted society. Their influence enabled an entire race to receive the equality promised by our founding fathers. Any addition to this list would require a renowned, accomplished person leading the tide of a cultural revolution.

But, how much water is left in the sea of injustice? Louis Farrakhan seems to think it is overflowing.

Last Monday, he kicked off his national tour. As he makes his way across the United States, thousands will gather to hear the man preach the same things advocated 30 years ago. Farrakhan, who organized the Million Man March, expresses notions similar to Malcolm X, only in the '60s these ideas were timely.

Leaps and bounds have been made since the civil rights movement, yet he hardly recognizes them. Farrakhan is simply a parasite feeding off of the image of Malcolm X

But of course, he claims he is a misunderstood man, just like Malcolm X. In an interview on 60 Minutes, Farrakhan was accused of being anti-Semitic. After he was shown a clip of one of his speeches implying Jewish people are inhuman sea creatures controlling the government that worship in the synagogue of Satan, Farrakhan denied the charges.

Justifying his simile of Jewish people as octopuses, Farrakhan said it was the white man who has continually exploited and oppressed the darker-skinned man — and history wrote itself.

Farrakhan also claimed he was only quoting the Bible, which states the same in the Book of Revelation. His citing of this statement is correct, only he used it incorrectly. It actually reads: "I know the slander of those who say they are Jews and are not, but are a synagogue of Satan. Even if Farrakhan had used the quote in the proper context, problem - he doesn't believe in Christianity. Yes, this man, who changed his last name because of his devotion to the Islam religion, only uses Biblical quotes as hateful ammunition against another race. Astoundingly, his message blatantly contradicts all the love and peace that Is-

So if Farrakhan is a malicious, anti-Semitic liar whose ideas are outdated, why all the popularity?

Simple — he's an entertainer. Just like Rush Limbaugh, Farrakhan has the ability to woo audiences by endorsing their outlandish ideas. Only, Farrakhan is dangerous, posing the possibility of an all-out race war.

In this day and age, it takes a smooth talker to cause people to regress to such ideas. As a young, aspiring singer, Farrakhan's nickname was "the Charmer." Like the snake that he is, Farrakhan has charmed thousands of followers who are spellbound from the poison of his speeches.

Sucking the venom of his deadly words out of the minds of thousands requires recognition of Farrakhan as a performer. Although he may not get $1 billion from any Middle Eastern country, he wouldn't make a bad living as a celebrity impressionist.

Farrakhan should wake up from his 30 year nap and smell the roses. To make any progress in today's society, everyone needs to realize the only race that needs to embrace and fight for each other is the human race.

When a man comes along with this endorsement, he might join the ranks of Washington, DuBois, King and Malcolm X. But Farrakhan certainly doesn't hold a candle to these leaders.

> Erin Fitzgerald is a senior political science and English major

AOLP offers caring, understanding to fish

As a former executive for the Aggie Orientation Leader Program (AOLP), I had a little difficulty accepting Michael Landauer's column on April 17. Freshman come to TAMU scared and confused, wondering if they made the correct choice in schools. Do we, the AOLP show them the best side of A&M that we can?

Absolutely. Do we lie to them?

All Orientation Leaders are told from the beginning that they are to tell the fish the truth. At the same time, however, we want the fish to be excited by their choice in school. We want the fish to maintain the Aggie spirit and uphold the Aggie Code of Honor. We are the first real contact that most freshman receive at A&M, and through our actions, we seek to make them comfortable as a part of the Aggie family.

We have no need to "sell" them the University, however, because they are already here. Our Orientation Leaders are not paid because we want them to be excited about what they are doing. If they don't find enough motivation in the helping of fish and their families, we don't want them as part of the organization. Every student at this University went through a New Student Conference. The Orientation Leaders give freely of their time and do a tremendous job making over 8,000 students feel more comfortable and pre-pared at A&M. I would like to congratulate this year's Orientation Leaders and wish them luck in having a fun and helpful summer. I would also like to thank all the past Orientation Leaders who dedicated their time and energy to help new students in need.

Paul Springer Class of '97

Halbrook's column assumes too much

I'm sure Shannon Halbrook (column, April 11) is not the first person to believe that David Kaczynski was motivated by the $1 million reward offer, and not his conscience, to tell the FBI that he believed his brother, Ted Kaczynski, was the infamous Unabomber. But Halbrook's contention that Ted Kaczynski is "being shafted" based on "flimsy" evi dence and his brother's greed is ludicrous.

Ted Kaczynski may well be innocent. So far he has been charged only with possessing bomb-making materials.

Fortunately, in our society a person is considered innocent until proven guilty.

Regardless of popular opinion or media coverage, only a jury of the defendant's peers can judge whether he is guilty or innocent and only after hearing evidence from the prosecution and defense.

> Jim Hiney Class of '85

The Battalion encourages letters to the editor and will print as many as space allows. Letters must be 300 words or less and include the author's name, class, and hone number.

We reserve the right to edit letters for length, style, and accuracy. Letters may be submitted in person at 013 Reed McDonald. A valid student ID is required. Letters may also be mailed to:

The Battalion - Mail Call

13 Read McDonald

013 Reed McDonald Texas A&M University College Station, TX 77843-1111

Fax: (409) 845-2647

