news BRIEFS

Earth Day festivities to be held tomorrow

The Texas A&M chapter of the Texas Environmental Action Coalition is co-sponsoring an Earth Day Celebration Saturday from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. at the archery fields on University Drive.

Friends Just Peace Institute, a branch of Friends Congregational Church in College Station, is co-sponsoring the event, which will feature live music, food, more than 80 exhibitors and vendors, games, and a garage sale benefiting Twin City Mission.

Marathon to benefit the heart association

The 13th Annual Medical Micro Marathon benefiting the American Heart Association begins 8:30 a.m. Saturday at the Joe H. Reynolds Medical Building.

The fun run is organized by the Texas Aggie Medical Student Association Classes of 1998 and 1999 and is sponsored by Scott and White Memorial Hospital and Clinic, Columbia Medical Center and Copy Corner.

Patients' teaching power focus of lecture

Distinguished physician Ellen Beck, M.D., will describe the teaching power of patients during her April 29 lecture at the Texas A&M College of Medicine.

Beck will speak at noon in the Reynolds Medical Building Lecture Hall I as part of the second annual O.C. Cooper Lectureship.

The Cooper Lectureship is sponsored by the College of Medicine's Department of Family Medicine and was established last year to honor retiring physician and professor O.C. Cooper, M.D.

12th Man Foundation to hold competition

The Texas A&M Twelfth Man Student Foundation is sponsoring its International Shoot-Out Competition benefiting the U.S. Cerebral Palsy Association 9 a.m. to noon Saturday at G. Rollie White Coliseum.

The charge is $5 to shoot 50 free throws.

Congress passes spending bill

The new legislation will provide more services to some and less to others for the remaining five months of the fiscal year

WASHINGTON (AP) — In a gauge of how the federal budget climate has changed, Democrats considered those winners in the huge compromise spending bill for fiscal 1996 that Congress prepared for President Clinton's promised signature Thursday. The House approved the legislation 399-25, and Senate passage was expected quickly.

The $159 billion measure, covering nine Cabinet-level departments and dozens of agencies for the remaining five months of the fiscal year, will provide additional services for some Americans and less for others. There is $1.4 billion to help hire 100,000 local police officers, but $278 million — about a third less than last year — for the Legal Services Corp., which provides lawyers for the poor.

The bill was the product of grueling talks between the White House and Congress. In the end, the administration had won $5 billion more than the House had approved months ago — still leaving spending for all federal agencies a whopping $20 billion below 1995 levels, according to the non-partisan Congressional Budget Office.

"The world has changed and we're headed in the right direction," said House Appropriations Committee Chairman Bob Livingston, R-La., leader in the GOP drive to slice federal spending and shrink government.

Democrats preferred to focus instead on the money they restored. That included $350 million for Clinton's prized Goals 2000 education reform program, down $22 million from last year but originally targeted for elimination by the House. The Occupational Safety and Health Administration would get $305 million — a 2 percent cut from last year instead of the 11 percent reduction the House initially approved.

Democrats pointed to the $7.2 billion that would be spent for education for school districts with large numbers of poor children. That would be the same as last year, but $1.2 billion more than the original House figure, a cut Democrats had warned could cost the jobs of 40,000 teachers.

Grants to states for social services will be $2.4 billion, or $419 million less than a year ago. Pell grants for college students will be $4 billion, about a one-fifth cut from last year. The Department of Housing and Urban Development will see a $5.5 billion reduction in the budget to $19 billion.

Northgate

said that because Northgate is an important part of A&M tradition, it is essential to have a student representative sit on the board.

McDaniel said having an A&M representative will hopefully provide feedback representative of a majority of students' opinions that can be presented to the council as it makes decisions about the revitalization and restructuring of Northgate.

"If we can achieve that," McDaniel said, "we have successfully represented the Texas A&M student population."

Pavlinksi said his first goal as the Northgate liaison is to inform students about the Northgate project. He said communication between the city and the student body has been lacking in the past.

"I just want to bridge the gap between the city and A&M students," Pavlinksi said.

One of the biggest misconceptions that students have about Northgate, Pavlinksi said, is that the district is like a strip mall, beginning at E-Z Mart and ending at the Dixie Chicken. He said students do not realize that Northgate encompasses a larger area, which includes the neighborhoods behind the stores and bars.

Pavlinksi said that some students think of Northgate as a dirty place where they drink on the weekends.

"They think 'Northgate — that's us,'" Pavlinksi said. "That's our place to hang out."

Pavlinksi said that in some of his environmental design classes, students have discussed how architecture is declining in the wake of cookie-cutter designs, which are somewhat repetitious models that lack originality.

"I think Northgate is a unique area of College Station and needs to be treated as such," Pavlinksi said. "We don't want to lose it to another strip shopping center."

But, Pavlinksi said, Northgate's infrastructure, parking and streets need to be renewed.

Overall, he said there needs to be a balance between Northgate's historic past, its present status as a student hangout, and what it will become in the future.

"I'd like to keep Northgate the student center it is right now," Pavlinksi said. "But I'd also like to see it preserved as part of the heritage of where College Station came from."

Morales opens Austin office

AUSTIN (AP) — Democrat Senate candidate Victor Morales moved part of his campaign operation from his pickup truck to an office Thursday.

But the new space isn't fancy, and the Dallas-area school teacher says an office and its trappings won't change his style.

"Please do not think anything has gone to my head," Morales told supporters outside the campaign office, located about four miles from the Capitol. "I'll remain that at no time will I change or become someone else."

Morales made his way into Nov. 5 general election against Republican Sen. Phil Gramm after leading four candidates in March primary and general U.S. Rep. John Bryant in April 9 runoff.
