Leary's wish granted

The prophet of LSD will 'ride the light into space'

HOUSTON (AP) — Two days before he died, Timothy Leary watched a videotape of a satellite blazing a trail of light as it crashed through the Earth's atmosphere.

What Leary saw was himself. "He said, 'That's me. I'm that light,'" longtime friend Carol Rosin said.

Leary decided he would entrust Celestis Inc. of Houston to pack 7 grams of his cremated remains in an aluminum, lipstick-sized capsule and blast them into orbit.

Just last week, the quintessential inner-space traveler and prophet of LSD had told Rosin of his wish for a celestial burial.

Leary told Rosin: "My life work has been to empower the individual, to free herself or himself to grow and be more free. Today we move into the next place ... (and) ride the light into space with your friends."
