Trump tops political leaders in speaker fees

NEW YORK (AP) — The Donald's talk is certainly not cheap. The New York Post reported Monday that entrepreneur Donald Trump is getting a net $80,000, plus first-class expenses for two, to fly to Melbourne, Australia, next year to give a 45-minute keynote address. The topic is "Ingredients of Success."

TRUMP

Trump's fee tops those commanded by retired Gen. Colin Powell, Henry Kissinger and various ex-presidents and motivational speakers. Powell, for example, is thought to get $60,000 per appearance.

The Washington Speakers Bureau made the approach to Trump at the request of ICM Australia. It says up to 10,000 business owners and managers may attend the seminar.

Butthole Surfers concert ends on sour note

CORPUS CHRISTI (AP) — A concert by alternative rockers the Butthole Surfers ended on a sour note when lead singer Gibby Haynes got ticked off.

When an audience member threw a wristwatch at him, injuring his hand, Haynes told the 5,000 fans to "shut up and go home."

He angrily yelled at the unidentified watch-slinger and challenged the rest of the audience to physically punish anyone they saw throwing anything.

The four-hour concert Saturday at the Texas Sky Festival Park also featured the Rev. Horton Heat and the Toadies.

Before leaving the stage, Haynes called Corpus Christi a city of "white trash" and said he didn't care if people refused to buy the band's newest album.

MTV branches out with second channel

NEW YORK (AP) — MTV is creating a new channel aimed at providing videos for slightly older viewers in order to carve a niche in the next generation of cable TV, industry observers said Monday.

M2: Music Television, a 24-hour service, debuts Aug. 1 in as few as 1 million homes, mostly home satellite systems. Selling M2 to cable systems begins next week, MTV said.

"You'll see a lot of these channels launching over the next couple of years," said Derek Baine, a cable analyst for Paul Kagan Associates of Carmel, Calif. "Everybody's gearing for an increase in channel capacity."

Baine said the cable ventures of MTV's parent company, Viacom Inc., also include MTV's previous spinoff for older rockers, VH1, as well as kids' Nickelodeon, Nick at Nite, TV Land, and Showtime Networks.

"Viacom has a lot of leverage with their other channels for doing package deals," Baine said.

As MTV's mirror image, M2's logotype is a "2" embedded in an MTV logo as seen from behind. Its "free form" music video playlist will aim for the elder part of MTV's 18- to 24-year-old core audience, MTV researchers said.

Critics of the original channel say it now offers too many game shows, news programs and documentaries.

M2 also will be the first cable channel to provide 24-hour intercast service, a supplement that displays M2 video, text and graphics on personal computers equipped with special circuitry.

"They're starting small and trying to build up an image, a gotta-have-it mentality," said analyst Jill Krutick of Smith Barney. "If it's done well, they should be expanding their audience."

hide themselves from it. Sam's ex-wife Bunny (Francis McDormand), for instance, has had her share of emotional problems. But instead of facing them she buries them in Texas football teams.

Another figure of Sam's past is his teenage love Pilar (Elizabeth Pena). When Sam and Pilar reunite, their old feelings rekindle and they fall in love again—only to have her mother Mercedes (Miriam Colon) reiterate the spite she always had for their relationship.

Sayles says history is always looming, and it draws the borders between countries, states and societies.

Like any mystery story, the key to Wade's death is exposed at the end—but it is the surprising revelation made because of this discovery that is important.

Phenomenon

Phenomenon may sound a bit hokey; that's because it is.

But while it is an unbelievable and cheesy love story, it is also a great escape, which is needed every once and a while. After all, good movies don't always have to mirror reality. And though Phenomenon may have no basis in reality, its message is one all people can relate to: if we can all locate the rabbits in our garden and set them free, we have the ability to grow as people—to live, learn and help others.
