Vice Presidential Debate

Gore, Kemp plan to focus on Dole, Clinton

When asked about the possibility of running for president in four vears. Al Gore hastens to end the line of inquiry. Jack Kemp shakes his head and wags an admonish-

As they prepare for Wednesday night's debate, the candidates for vice president are trying to keep the focus on Bill Clinton and Bob Dole. "It is not Al Gore vs. Jack Kemp," the GOP vice presidential nominee said Tuesday.

In pre-debate interviews with The Associated Press, Gore and Kemp predicted their 90minute, prime-time debate would closely follow the themes of Sunday's encounter between Clinton and Dole. That exchange focused on tax policy and the state of the economy, on education, welfare and other social policies, and on the U.S. role abroad at the close of the 20th century.

Gore, for example, said he was determined to reinforce Clinton's argument that the GOP ticket's $548 billion tax-cut plan would require devastating cuts in Medicare and education spending.

"The numbers do not add up,"

Kemp, for his part, said Dole had scored points in casting Clinton as a liberal hiding behind conservative election-year promises. Kemp promised to follow up by taking issue with a new Clinton campaign ad in which the president says he views his job as "taking care of the American people."

As they discussed their expectatheir views of the vice presidency, the former House colleagues voiced friendship and respect for each other and predicted their encounter would be a civil affair.

You can disagree without being disagreeable," Gore said Monday afternoon during a break in his debate preparations in Sarasota, where former New York Rep. Tom Downey was the Democratic stand-in for Kemp.

Candidates: death penalty should include more crimes

(AP) — Here are the answers ON THE ISSUES of the major presidential candidates to the question: "Should the death penalty be expanded to include more crimes?

Bill Clinton

"My 1994 crime bill expanded the death penalty for drug kingpins, murderers of federal law enforcement officers, and nearly 60 additional categories of violent felons."

Bob Dole

"Throughout my career, I have been a consistent supporter of the death penalty. I believe that parole for violent offenders should be ended and the endless appeals process drastically reformed. Earlier this year, in order to stop convicted criminals from abusing the appeals process, I secured passage of comprehensive habeas corpus reform.

"I do not, per se, advocate expanding the death penalty. However, I do believe that once AUSTIN (AP) — Gov. George W. Bush would have been asked to answer questions under oath about his personal history of drinking and driving — a subject he has avoided — if he had been selected as a juror on Tuesday.

But Bush was dismissed from jury duty after the defense attorney in a driving-while-intoxicated case moved to have the governor struck because of his power to pardon convicts. "I thought that there might be a conflict, but I didn't know it would be grounds for dismissal from the jury," Bush said. "I accept the verdict and I will go back to work, but I'm glad to do my duty. 'It's important for citizens from all walks of life to do their duty when called.

Bush was one of 18 potential jurors called for a driving-while-intoxicated case in which six jurors were to be impaneled. After his dismissal, Bush was asked by reporters if he had ever been arrested for driving while intoxicated.

"I do not have a perfect record as a youth," Bush responded.

When asked if that meant yes or no, he said, "When I was young, I did a lot of foolish things. But I will tell you this, I urge people not to drink and drive. It's an important message for all people to hear. I don't drink, and I hope others don't drink and drive as well.

This is one way to show they (students) are socially responsible, give back to the community and possibly save someone's life,' Belvin said. "The greatest need right now is for minority donors."

Congress authorized the National Marrow Donor Program in 1986, and it began one year later.

Belvin said they have been averaging 93 matches a month, their highest rate yet. The national program is preparing to celebrate its 5,000th transplant. After a match is found, donors are contacted by a local bone marrow program that conducts more screening to determine if a transplant is possible.

"A transplant essentially replaces
