PING

Betty Unterberger, a Patricia and Bookman Peters history professor, said she is impressed with Wan's teaching.

"It is wonderful to have a person with his background with our department," Unterberger said. "I finished my Ph.D. at Duke also, and I taught at the University of Peking in 1988, so we have a lot to talk about."

Unterberger said Wan lived through a significant period in modern Chinese history.

"He rose above difficult circumstances with a burning desire to make a difference with China's relations with the world," Unterberger said. "His self-learning is remarkable, especially with the conditions he was in."

Unterberger said Chinese students study under different conditions than A&M students.

"At the University of Peking Library, there was no heat," Unterberger said. "Students wore jackets and gloves and waited in line just to find a seat. The students also lived with six people to a dormitory room."

Unterberger said Ping has discussed many research projects with her.

"We had a deep philosophical conversation," Unterberger said. "He knows how to compare Western and Asian philosophy."

Julia Kirk Blackwelder, head of the A&M history department, said the faculty and students are fortunate to work with Ping for the fall semester.

"He has adapted quickly, and he has a lot of teaching experience and diverse settings that prepared him well to deal with our students," Blackwelder said. Blackwelder said students should

"We are coming to the 21st century, and we need to have more imagination for the future, for a better society and for a better world."

visiting lecturer

take advantage of Wan's courses.

"It is important for students to know they may never have a chance to study with someone like this again," Blackwelder said. "I was never this fortunate as an undergraduate or graduate student."

Ping said he wants to give students a broad view of the world.

"We live in a time where everything is globalized," Ping said. "If we don't have a global perspective, how do we understand globalization?"

Ping said students should study history, because it is important for the future.

"A French historian once said, 'The present needs the past only with a reference for the future,'" Wan said. "We are coming to the 21st century, and we need to have more imagination for the future, for a better society and for a better world."

Shields strives for a team of children

NEW YORK (AP) — Brooke Shields wants three children, while fiancé Andre Agassi is hoping to field a team.

Shields

"I'd like to be married for a little while before we have kids," Shields says in the Oct. 19 TV Guide. Once she's ready for children, the question will be: how many?

"I think men always go into the higher numbers because they're not the ones going through the actual process and they just think of a brood," said Shields, star of the new hit NBC sitcom, Suddenly Susan.

"It's their mentality," she said. "Let's have more. Let's have a team!" They think in terms of teams. I think three would be great."

Mum is the word on when the TV star will marry the tennis pro.

"We won't be a perpetually engaged couple, that's for sure," said Shields, 31, adding she hopes for a paparazzi-free wedding.

"Hopefully, I'll do this just once ... Hopefully, it won't be destroyed by the press," she said. "Just the one day that you want to not give away to anybody else."

Picasso gets a bad rap in film

NEW YORK (AP) — James Ivory disclaims any desire to bring the great man down, even though critics have suggested that his Surviving Picasso depicts the great artist as mercurial, philandering, even miserly and mean.

"This is the way he was. We all know he was probably the century's greatest artist. Everybody knows that," the director said. "Everyone accepts that. And it would be silly to imply anything other than that. But sometimes he was this man who behaved the way he did towards people."

Should allowances be made for genius?

"People do make allowances," said Ivory, a three-time Oscar nominee. "That's why you have a story like this. Of course, you make allowances. Genius is part of the attraction; it's also a part of the doom of these people who (are attracted) like a moth towards the candle. Geniuses attract all kinds of people — for better or worse, for them."

Ice skating king clowns for camera

LAS VEGAS (AP) — Olympic gold medal skater Scott Hamilton has this thing about the fountains at Caesar's Palace.

In 1985, he was shot from a cannon across the fountains adorning the front of the Sunset Strip resort. The stunt was part of the TV show Circus of the Stars.

Friday night found Hamilton skating on a giant ice rink built over the fountains, clowning for a TV special as a gold chain-bedecked Las Vegas lounge lizard, drawing a standing ovation from a crowd of 3,000.

The ice rink, half the size of a football field, was crafted in the mid-90s.

Too Hot To Skate, scheduled to air on CBS in January, features skating stars Oksana Baiul, Michelle Kwan, Viktor Petrenko, Katarina Witt, Rosalynn Sumner, Kurt Browning, Todd Eldredge, Nicole Bobek and Tara Lipinski.

Baby born into family of music

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — Little James Harris' future is in music, his father says.

The baby, born July 11, christened Saturday, was the son of producer Jimmy Jam Harris and his wife, singer Brandy. His godmother is Jackson. And the minister who baptized Tyler was O.C. Statton, former R&B artist.

Motown Records' Clarence Avant was among the friends and relatives who attended the private ceremony at the home of Jimmy Jam and Lisa, just west of Minneapolis.
