Waters will also study archives and records in Dallas and Hearne to learn more about the camp and its residents.
After getting permission this spring from government agencies and the city of Hearne to examine the camp, Waters formed a graduate seminar course in which students help him excavate the site and interview Hearne residents. He has also invited undergraduate volunteers from his introductory archeology class to help with the investigation.
Now the challenge, he said, is to construct a comprehensive history of the camp's residents using the combination of artifacts, records and interviews.

"There's an incredible amount of artistry involved."

Carolyn Boyd
Graduate student in anthropology

"So many of these camps are disappearing," Waters said. "People paid no attention to them for so long. We want to get a good, well-rounded sense of what life was like and what the culture was there."

Damon Burden, a graduate student, dusts off the castle during the dig.

Taiwan treats pop star with contempt

TAIPEI, Taiwan (AP) — Michael Jackson got a rude welcome from a couple of city councilmen angry over the pop star's alleged child molestation.

Jackson received a meritorious achievement award Saturday from the mayor of Kaohsiung, Taiwan's second-largest city, where Jackson was to perform Sunday night.

As the meeting was concluding, city councilors Huang Chao-hsing and Lin Ti-chuan burst into the room and angrily demanded to know what Jackson's qualifications were for receiving the award.

Huang kicked over a tea table in front of Jackson, prompting the surprised pop star to ask, "Is that guy all right?" the Kaohsiung-based Commons Daily newspaper reported.

The two men tried to prevent Jackson from leaving by the front door of city hall, but were brushed aside by the singer's bodyguards.

Told that the award to Jackson was in recognition of his international contribution, Lin replied, "His international contribution has been to molest little boys."

During his last appearance in Taiwan in 1994, Jackson was dogged by accusations of child sexual abuse in the United States. No charges were ever filed after Jackson settled with his accuser for a reported $15 million.

'Baywatch' hunk beats depression

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Jose Solano is on top of the world as the new hunk on "Baywatch."

Not long ago, however, he was mired in despair.

"I had a breakdown. The outgoing, persevering person that I am wasn't there anymore. I became very depressed," Solano told the syndicated program "American Journal" in an interview for broadcast Monday.

Those dark days grew out of the death of his best friend in a helicopter crash while they were serving in the Middle East. He was also emotionally scarred from his job as a Navy corpsman preparing bodies for shipment home during the Persian Gulf War, he said.

When he returned to Sacramento, he was hospitalized for three days with a mental breakdown.

The 25-year-old Solano told "American Journal" he wanted to talk about his past because he feared the gossip tabloids would exploit the story.

"I want people to know who I am, my struggles, and my fight to get out ahead in my life," Solano said.

Michener and wife win award

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Prize winner James Michener and his late wife received a prize for giving their money away.

The couple, who has done more than $100 million in donations to museums around the country, received the Medal for Distinguished Philanthropy by the American Association of Museums on Saturday.

The writer said he and his wife came from deprived families, so they learned to value the giving and education.

Michener credited his wife with being the force behind his philanthropic efforts.

Madonna gives birth by C-section

NEW YORK (AP) — Just to set a record, Madonna did end up giving birth by Caesarean section.

It had been rumored that she wanted a natural childbirth, but she changed her mind, and now the singer has confirmed it in the Oct. 28 People magazine.

Madonna said she went into labor at 3:30 a.m. and reluctantly agreed to a Caesarean section procedure 12 hours later when the birth had not progressed sufficiently.

"Goodbye, everyone," she said as she was wheeled into the operating room at Good Samaritan Hospital in Los Angeles where the baby, named, was born Oct. 14 at 4:31 p.m.

"I'm going to get my nose job this time."

GOP senator lets loose with music

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Republican Sen. Orrin Hatch is a troubadour. The Republican senator has written more than 100 songs during his past year. He writes gospel hymns and country tunes.

Hatch keeps a keyboard in his office in Washington and is near a piano. He has sent out to musicians, including the "Boys" backup Billy Hinsche, a gospel song but had no ideas about it.

"He called me and said, 'I'm going to make it a rap song.' You've got to get me disoriented."
