After convicting Cuellar for the death of an unner and a born child, the vin award panel could not reach a decision received a prize in on punishment.

CORPUS CHRISTI, Texas (AP) — Jurors are slated to resume deliberations Monday on the punishment for a drunken driver who crashed into a pregnant woman's car, causing the premature birth and death of her child.

The case, one of the first in Texas to test whether a person can be held criminally liable for harming a fetus, faces the possibility of a mistrial after jurors went home for the weekend deadlocked on a sentence.

The same seven-woman, fiveman jury took just one hour to convict Frank Flores Cuellar of intoxication manslaughter. But after deliberating 4 1/2 hours Friday on punishment, the panel said it could not reach a decision and was sent home.

Cuellar, 50, faces anywhere from probation to 20 years in prison for the death of Krystal Zu-

According to testimony, Cuellar was intoxicated at more than twice the legal limit when he collided with a car driven by Jeannie Coronado as she returned from a latenight trip to the grocery store. Coronado, 7 1/2 months pregnant, gave birth to Krystal by emergency Caesarean section. Weighing just 4 pounds and having suffered extensive brain damage, the infant died 44 hours later. Cuellar's attorney, Anne Marshall, argued during trial that her client could not be held responsible for the child's death because Krystal was not alive when the accident occurred.

Marshall repeatedly cited the state's legal meaning of person, defined as an individual "who has been born and is alive.'

While quickly rejecting that arniga, who was delivered shortly gument, jurors are stuck on the is-

District Attorney Carlos Valdez has asked for the maximum sentence, citing three previous convictions Cuellar received for driving while intoxicated.

'You think Mr. Cuellar has learned his lesson? He hasn't," Valdez told jurors. "The only sure way to stop him from driving is to put him away."

However, Marshall asked the jury to consider probation after Cuellar's brother-in-law and stepdaughter-inlaw testified that he had a drinking problem and wanted help.

A recovery program, Marshall said, "does not let him escape punishment."

Cuellar also is charged with felony DWI and intoxication assault in connection with the accident. He will be tried on those charges later, and faces a maximum of 10 years in prison for each.

"My chemistry class is killing me," she said. "I probably would have gone to the (football) game, but for now I have to buckle down."

Other freshmen agree that their studying habits have changed since they came to college. Marisa Sanez, a freshman zoology major, said she has improved her study habits as the semester has progressed.

"The first test didn't go so well, but the second I feel much stronger about because I've studied more," she said.

Mid-semester grades for all undergraduate students with less than 30 semester credit hours are available at the Pavilion and the Registrar's office in Heaton Hall.

"My parents have put a pretty strict GPR (grade-point ratio) requirement on me," she said. "I'm hoping there's a couple of B's on Sanez said tips on telling parents about grades have been given in class. She said she has already told her parents how difficult her classes are.

"I know my parents will understand," she said. "I think by the end of the semester my grades will improve."

Clay Melton, a senior physics major and a hopeful December graduate, said mid-semester progress concerns him "big time."

"Nothing can screw up now," he said. "I've got to get out of here."

Melton said the responsibility is his to succeed so he will graduate in December.

"Do I have control over getting an A? No," he Garcia said she is dreading the grades her said. "I do have control over doing well. It's all
