INVESTIGATION

"(Greek organizations) have to follow the University's rules and state laws," Powell said. "Fraternalities and sororities have their own rules. There are a number of levels at which this can be approached. The national [Kappa Alpha] organization and Texas A&M are dealing with it."
The alleged hazing incident occurred within the jurisdiction of the Brazos County Sheriff's Department, which is outside the Bryan-College Station city limits.
Rita Watkins, Sheriff's Department chief deputy, said the investigation could take some time.
"[The investigator] will be talking to quite a few individuals," Watkins said. "This will be a lengthy investigation so we can be as thorough as possible. We're trying to present it to the District Attorney's office as soon as possible."

MILK

MarketSource, a college marketing company, researched and managed the tour's promotion.
Matt Gendaszek, MarketSource tour manager, said the Glamour tour allows everyone involved to profit.
"It's a win-win situation for everyone involved," he said. "Advertisers get to display products, students get free samples and information, and the school gets to hold a great event without worrying about running it."
Deborah McKeand, associate merchandising editor for Glamour, said valuable information is available to students at each booth.
"It's a chance for students to come and gather information on career and financial strategies, fashion, beauty, health and fitness, and dressing for success," she said.

Along with the milk tour, Glamour is honoring Emily Norman, a senior mechanical engineering major at A&M and one of their Annual Top 10 College Women winners.

McKeand said the Glamour 4.0 College Tour revolves around a number of themes.
"4.0 stands for the perfect grade point average, four more years until the new millennium, four more years of a new presidential term, and students going 'for it,'" she said.
The Milk Mustache Competition will be today from noon to 2 p.m. Judges from the "Milk, Where's Your Mustache?" advertising agency will pick the winning milk mustache photo.
The tour is Oct. 24th and 25th from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. on the Sbisalawn.
For more information, students can check out the milk website at www.whymilk.com or call 1-800-WHY-MILK.

Culver said the policy was fans with children feel uncomfortable.
"I find it upsetting," she said. "A&M is telling me they don't care and they are putting me in a financial hardship."
"I've taken my 1-year-old to World, other football games, circus, and never once had to pay for her," Culver said. "It's the ball stadium) a public place it's not up to A&M to decide best for my child."
Kotch suggested parents their children to babysitters during the games.
"I'd rather see them spend money on a babysitter than having an irritated baby from person during a football game," Kotch said. "First Baptist Church and Brazos Valley Museum programs for children during games."

"In the past it was considered good bull to throw stuff around and be really messy," he said. "But it has improved."
The last food fight in Duncan was in May 1995.
James Washington, Duncan food service manager, said the Corps was punished by having to clean up the mess they made.
"The general made the entire Corps come in and clean up," he said. "They mopped the floors, cleaned the walls and ceilings. They even cleaned the kitchen."

Washington said the Corps has cooperated with his staff. Cadets are willing to take responsibility for cleaning their area when they are excessively messy.

"Any mess hall with this many people coming in at once will create problems," said. "But when this happens I talk to the general and he responds right away."
Washington said the service in Duncan is quick and effective.
"This is an extremely efficient system that have going here," he said.
"I think Sbisalawn and the Commons should conform to some of their ways. They are in and out."
