Dole makes last stop in Houston

HOUSTON (AP) — Texans waved American flags and the smell of barbecue filled the air Monday as the Bush family rallied around Bob Dole in the final hours of the Republican candidate's run for the White House.

"I told you this the last time you were here, and I'm even more certain of it now: Come tomorrow, Texas will vote for the next president, Bob Dole," Texas Gov. George W. Bush said.

"We love you here in Texas, Sen. Dole, because we know you're a man of your word."

Bush's parents, former President George Bush and Barbara Bush, along with U.S. Sen. Kay Bailey Hutchison, joined Dole and his wife Elizabeth on a stage in a strip mall parking lot in humid west Houston.

Entertainers including The Oak Ridge Boys and the MTV vee-jay known only as Kennedy also stood by Dole, whose voice was hoarse after 70 hours of almost nonstop campaigning.

Several thousand people danced and whirled "Dole-Kemp" signs to the beat of songs like "Rescue Me" and "Respect," performed by a live band. A handful of people were treated for heat exhaustion.

Dole emphasized he could be trusted and that President Clinton could not.

"I want you to be proud and I want your children to be proud because this is an important election," Dole said.

He asked the Houstonians to get to work and convince their friends to vote.

"I would say to the Republicans or Democrats or independents or members of the Reform Party, if you're concerned about America, you'd better be concerned about what happens tomorrow in the election," Dole said.

He vowed to return power to the states and to the people, a theme also touched on by Mrs. Hutchison.

"George (Gov. Bush) has a saying: Texans can govern Texas, thank you very much. And Bob Dole is going to try to make that happen," she said.

In brief remarks, former President Bush stressed the importance of character.

"Here's a couple of words to remember: duty, honor, country," Bush said.

Second term could mean new troubles for Clinton

WASHINGTON (AP) — Balancing the budget and keeping the economy growing may not be President Clinton's biggest problems if he wins re-election. The real headaches could be more Whitewater embarrassments, hostile investigations by Congress — and even the airing of a sexual harassment suit.

"The pileup is unprecedented," said University of Wisconsin political scientist Charles O. Jones. "Choose your scandal, any one of which could be difficult, at the very least embarrassing."

"If it's more than that, it can paralyze the presidency, if there are impeachable offenses," Jones said.

Republicans have already pummeled Clinton's administration with investigations. They have looked into Whitewater, the White House travel office firings, the borrowed FBI files, Vincent Foster's suicide and the billing documents, belonging to Hillary Rodham Clinton's law firm, that disappeared and then mysteriously turned up in the White House reading room.

If Republicans keep control of Congress, the investigations are sure to continue, along with a new flood of subpoenas against the White House. The first 1997 target will be foreign sources of political donations to Clinton's campaign.

Republican rival Bob Dole offers this vision of Clinton's future: "I'm willing to say right now, if he's re-elected he's going to spend half his time next year with investigations."

"That stuff is an enormous pain for an administration," said Norman Ornstein of the American Enterprise Institute. "Clearly you get a different agenda with a Democratic Congress."

A Republican Congress isn't the only problem for Clinton. Whitewater prosecutor Kenneth Starr is already spending money faster than the record setting Iran-Contra probe — more than $23 million in two years — and shows no sign of stopping any time soon.

Starr is intensifying his investigation of the first lady's work in regard to the savings loan at the heart of the Whitewater matter. Starr has already won convictions against Clinton's former Whitewater partners, James and Susan McDougal, as well as former Arkansas Gov. Jim Guy Tucker.

"There is always the possibility of this adding up to Watergate II," said Brookings Institution analyst Stephen Hess. "It doesn't have those dimensions yet by any means, but sure it's a possibility."

The president has not ruled out granting pardons, despite pressure from Dole to declare his intentions. But Hess said, "If he pardoned any of these people he would be creating a firestorm."

Also looming for Clinton is a sexual harassment lawsuit filed against him by former Arkansas state employee Paula Corbin Jones.

The Supreme Court has agreed to decide in its current term whether to uphold Clinton's argument that presidential immunity requires Jones to wait until he leaves office to pursue her case. The president has denied her allegations.

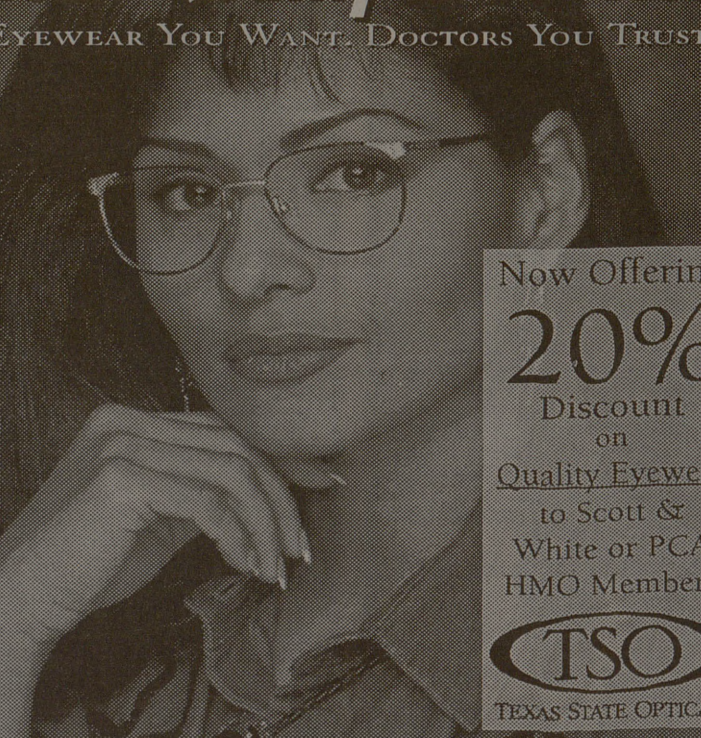

Scandals aside, second-term presidencies are notoriously unsuccessful. They historically have a year or two before they run out of steam. In the midterm elections that follow, the opposition party usually picks up seats in Congress, further limiting the president's power.

If successful today, Clinton would be the first Democrat to win two consecutive terms since Franklin D. Roosevelt in 1936.
