Dr. Douglas Guthrie, a Waco historian, will speak at the rededication highlighting Ross' contributions to the state of Texas.

Ross' family moved to Waco from Iowa a year after he was born, in 1839. He served the state as a Texas Ranger, sheriff of McLennan County, governor of Texas and president of Texas A&M. Ross was also a brigadier general in the Confederacy.

According to University Archives, Ross is known as one of the most colorful figures in A&M's history. He is credited with saving A&M from becoming a central Texas mental hospital in the late 1800s. His memory is kept alive on the A&M campus by a statue in front of the Academic Building and by the Ross Volunteers.

Joe Fenton, curator of the Sam Houston Sanders Corps of Cadets Center Museum and Class of '58, said Ross was probably the foremost individual to secure A&M's future.

"He was indeed a soldier, statesman and knightly gentleman because he insisted on that kind of attitude," Fenton said.

He said the rededication will attract a number of Confederate organizations because of Ross' notoriety.

"That's going to be a big shindig with every Confederate organization in the country," Fenton said.

The Corps of Cadets will not attend the rededication as a group.

Cindy Ericson, Deputy Corps Commander and a senior international studies and political science major, said the Civil War is still a sensitive subject to many people and the Corps wants to remain objective.

"Although we feel extremely loyal to Gen. Ross because of what he did for Texas and for A&M, we're aware of the diplomatic implications of going en masse," she said in reference to Ross' involvement with the Confederacy.

The Corps will send a representative from the Corps staff to the rededication.

The rededication of Ross' grave will be Saturday at 9 a.m. at Oakwood Cemetery in Waco. The cemetery is at the corner of LaSalle and 5th streets at the south end of the Baylor University campus.

The Texas Higher Education Coordinating Board (THECB) decides who is eligible for in-state tuition at all Texas universities.

Jim Ashlock, executive director for University Relations, said A&M must follow the Board's directives in the admissions process.

"There are pretty specific laws that you must be clear, unquestionable, bona fide residents of the state," Ashlock said. "In many cases, military dependents do qualify, especially those who grew up here or their parents were home-or property-owners here."

Jay Johnson, who is deputy commander of Picatinny Arsenal in New Jersey, said his family meets every residence criterion set by the Board except having a business association in the state, which his job will not allow.

"Because of Federal Ethics Procurement laws, it is illegal for me to have these relationships before I retire," he said. "There appears to be no effective appeal procedure."

The Johnsons sent the Board of Regents a follow-up letter in the first week of October but have not received a response.

"They have stalled," Pat Johnson said. "I think it's horrible that they can send military personnel all over the world, having to endure tremendous hardships on the family, and not cooperate for the children's education."

Donald Carter, registrar, said he did not want to discuss the issue.

"It's a sensitive subject right now," he said. "It's being handled by the System's legal office."

The Johnsons are not alone in their battle. Other military families are fighting the out-of-state tuition, which costs $7,000 a year more than in-state tuition.

Corina Krosescheo, a sophomore accounting major, pays out-of-state tuition. Her father,

Maj. Joe Krosescheo, is a resident who works in the taton in Washington, D.C.

"My parents have lawyers fighting this since uary of '95," she said.

Krosescheo attended public schools until she the 11th grade. Her father her she may have to discer her education at A&M cause he cannot afford the with the unexpected incre.

"My parents have dep our savings and we're on our third loan," she s was very excited to come and it's real sad that I have to leave after two yea.

Military dependent concnred with the cocency of how the policie interpreted.

"They can't tell us the act criteria," Pat Johnson said. "This is a great financial hardship."

"(John) Youngblood (versity lawyer) quoted to gressman Coleman that never make any exception their policy," Jay Johnson said. "Yet I've discovered at least cases when they have."

Gov. George Bush has the Attorney General's oim going into and the THECB to researc issue. They are consid whether the Legislature s... "When you uniform the policy by insti the season, i...

Col. Donald Johns deputy commandant of Corps of Cadets, said rulee surround the reside issue.

"There are perfectly ways of avoiding non-dency, but you have able to qualify for the Johnson said.

Ashlock said A&M consider the Texas reside who want to attend A&M deciding admissions.

"Only one-third of all agants are accepted to A&M a popular place because one of the best deals in the tion for a quality education Ashlock said. "We have to dr the line somewhere."

EVALUATIONS

The Student Senate also passed the Post-Tenure Review Policy Support Resolution, supporting the post-tenure review policy approved by the Faculty Senate Oct. 14.

Josh Duncan, Faculty Senate liaison and a sophomore general studies major, introduced the bill.

He said the Board of Regents mandates that a post-tenure review policy be implemented.

The Student Senate should support this policy, he said, because the Faculty Senate's policy takes into consideration how the policy will affect the recruitment and retention of A&M faculty.

"Tenure attracts a lot of professors, and having a post-tenure review policy will detour a lot of professors," Duncan said. "It (the policy) really does a good job to make it not too stringent, not too harsh. We need this post-tenure review policy and it's either going to be by the Board of Regents or the Faculty Senate."

Thomas Matheson, a senator for the College of Engineering and a senior industrial engineering major, said he supported the resolution because there had to be a policy and the Faculty Senate should be its creator.

"I think we should trust them (the Faculty Senate members) to know better than the Board of Regents what to do," Matheson said.

A Muster Ceremony bill was brought up as emergency legislation. The bill proposes that to allow all students to attend Muster, all tests end by 3:35 p.m. on April 21 and students not be penalized for missing a class after 3:35 p.m. on April 21. The Senate recommended that students still be held responsible for material covered.

The bill was passed unanimously.

The Bryan Anniversary Resolution, which wished the city of Bryan a happy 125th anniversary, passed unanimously also. A copy of the bill was presented to Kandy Rose, a member of the Bryan City Council.

An Officer Elections Efficiency bill was also passed.
