His season and career have been puzzling with the many disappointing events. But Oliver feels it is not totally unexplainable.

"I think everything happens for a reason," Oliver said. "When something happens like this, it's God telling you something is wrong.

When I got here, I kind of fell away from going to church and doing things like that. I need to settle down and quit partying so much.'

"He's an eager learner — he wants to be a good quarterback. He realizes that he has a lot of work to do, but at the same time he is anxious to get it done.' Though apparently relegated to the bench with the re-emergence of junior Branndon Stewart at quarterback, McCown feels like he is still a large part of the Aggies' recent string of successes. "We're still splitting repetitions in practice, so I think it (the situation) is pretty much the same," McCown said. "It just worked out that they moved the ball last week when Branndon was in there. Like I said last week, I'll do the best I can to try to help the team; and if the opportunity presents itself, I'll try to make the most of it."

Though he is known primarily for his skills at evading blitzing defenses, McCown balks at the notion that he is not as capable a drop-back passer as Stewart.

"I'll drop back and pass it, and I think Branndon's the same way; but if someone's going to chase us, we're going to get outside and run," McCown said. "I feel like we're pretty much the same.
