Virginity cannot be factor for scholarship

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) — A University of Arizona alumna wants to give scholarships to American Indian women — especially if they're virgins.

No deal, says the school, which wants the proposal rewritten before it will accept.

"We can't dictate morals," said Frank Felix, the university's director of scholarship development.

An information sheet distributed to high schools this fall said the proposed $250,000 Sally Keith Scholarship fund would be available to American Indian women who are residents of Arizona.

Applicants would be judged more on personality than grades, and "preference will be given to a girl who has been able to say 'no' to sex," the sheet said.

Sally Keith, 90, said she got the idea after learning about the high number of teen pregnancies in Arizona.

"I thought if I could find one girl every year and influence them to look ahead in their life rather than get involved in a pregnancy, that would be something wonderful that I'd do," she said.

The scholarship would be four years at the University of Arizona — $5,000 a year covering tuition, room and board.

Keith and the school must agree on the scholarship's language before it becomes official.

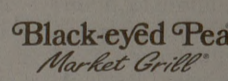

One Navajo woman at the university, Antoinette Davis, said she thinks the proposed scholarship terms delve too deeply into applicant's personal life.

More tasteless than Grandma's turkey

In this hilarious satire about the holidays in Texas' third smallest town, crisis looms and bad taste rules the day. Comic wizards Greg Currie and Brent Briscoe bring Tuna's 22 inhabitants to life through their quick-change artistry, creating a cast of Scrooges that are eccentric, spiteful and ultimately unforgettable. So if you and your family are tired of the same old holiday fare, take a trip to Tuna, Texas. It'll laugh the Dickens out of you.
