

Simpson faces tough
questioning

SANTA MONICA, Calif. (AP) — Confronted with the toughest physical evidence against him, O.J. Simpson on Monday couldn't explain how blood believed to be the victims' got into his Bronco or how he suffered hand cuts that plaintiffs claim were fingernail gouges from a death struggle.

Showing Simpson a close-up photograph taken three days after the slayings of a crescent-shaped cut on a finger, attorney Daniel Petrocelli charged: "It was a fingernail mark, wasn't it, sir?"

"I seriously doubt that," Simpson replied. "It was somebody's fingernails tapping into your skin, wasn't it?" Petrocelli asked.

Simpson suggested his then-5-year-old son, Justin, could have cut his finger while they were "rassling" in the days after the killings of Nicole Brown Simpson and Ronald Goldman.

"Unless it was Justin's, I really don't know," Simpson said with a hint of exasperation. "Are you saying it was your son's fingernail?" the lawyer asked.

"I'm not saying it was Justin's. I was saying he was the only one I was any heavy physical ... wrestling."

Petrocelli, pacing sometimes within inches of the witness, challenged Simpson to explain virtually every move he made during 86 minutes on the night of the slayings when his whereabouts are unknown.

Simpson maintained he was resting in bed or showering at the time, and also said he was chipping golf balls and taking his dog out for walk during those unaccounted-for minutes.

Petrocelli clearly tried to get a rise out of Simpson, but it didn't work. Once, the attorney paced so close to Simpson they were nearly nose to nose.

CHRONOMAT

At a time when instruments unerringly cope with Mach 1 flight data, continued improvements to the mechanical chronograph simply underscore that there's more to time than technology. A movement's intricate beauty or a hand-polished case's lustrous gleam do put technological progress in a broader perspective. Like the Concord, the world's first but surely not last supersonic transport, CHRONOMATS draw time and space ever closer with aesthetic excellence as well as outstanding technical performance.
