HOUSTON (AP) — The man suspected as Houston's Polo Shirt Bandit has regained consciousness, but remained in critical condition Sunday after shooting himself last week during a police chase.

William Frank Guess, 46, had just completed what police believe was bank robbery No. 38 last Wednesday, when a 911 call sparked a high-speed chase after the Temple-area resident.

As Harris County Sheriff's deputies closed in, Guess intentionally shot himself in the head.

Hermann Hospital officials said Sunday that Guess regained consciousness on Saturday. Although he is unable to talk, Guess can move his eyes to the left or right when asked. He remains on life-support, but is alert.

Family members have been to the hospital to visit Guess and consult with doctors about his condition.

Meanwhile, federal authorities are preparing charges against Guess.

For seven years, police have been tracking the Polo Shirt Bandit, who has kept authorities guessing about his identity since 1989.

fake beard, dark glasses, a baseball cap and wig — the Polo Shirt Bandit has successfully robbed 37 banks without hurting anyone.

Guess was a 1969 graduate of Temple High School and was the school's captain of the basketball and golf teams that year. He became a Temple-area car dealer who lived in the nearby community of Oenaville with his wife, his former high school sweetheart, and three sons.

His only previous criminal history were two convictions for drunken driving.

Stephen Sharum, who used his truck to stop Guess' rental car during the chase, said Saturday he's been told he may receive half of the $25,000 reward offered for the bandit's capture. He said he was contacted by the Clearing House Association of the Southwest, an association of Texas banks.

"I'm not going to bank on anything except what's in my checking account," Sharum said. "I didn't do it for the money. I'd like to have the money, but I don't want anything that's not coming to me."

Sharum said he could use the money, especially since his truck is now banded up.

But he said he would do it again even if there was no reward.

"I didn't know who it was they were chasing," Sharum said. "I just thought he was a guy that drove like an idiot. All I did was stop my truck in front of him. The officers out there put their lives on the line to surround him in the car."

BREAKFAST

"I have early-morning classes and I never have time to eat breakfast," Manson said. "The only time I have to eat is after 11:00."

Breakfast foods served all day include thirteen types of cereal, two kinds of meats, potatoes, biscuits, waffles, pancakes, omelettes and pastries.

Scott Bullock, a sophomore political science major, said the breakfast foods program allows him to eat breakfast even after breakfast hours.

"By the time I get out of my morning classes, I still want to eat breakfast," Bullock said.

Beck said lunch is the most popular meal of the day in all of the campus dining halls.

Bullock said by the time he makes it to a dining hall, it is usually lunch time.

"I know I should eat something before I go to my morning classes — maybe I would be more awake," Bullock said. "I know that a healthy breakfast is essential, and gets the day started."
