MUSIC REVIEW

Bush
Razorblade Suitcase
Interscope/Trauma Records

serve a good listen, but after so many ballads devoted followers of the band may find this bum mundane.

Tracks like "Greedy Fly," "Insect Kin" and "Cold Contagious" convey the messages of desperation, drug abuse and a separation of hearts, respectively.

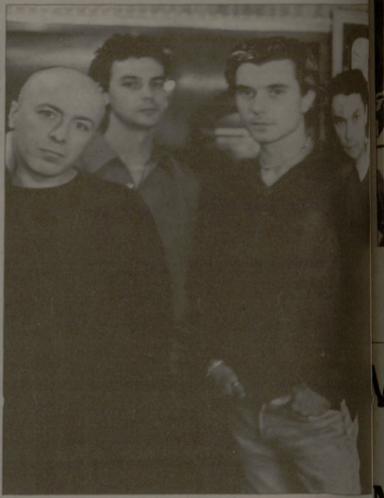

In "Insect Kin," Rosedale sings "You were wide of me just like the English sun/You caught the light again in a perfect way/The biggest threat of all is in the alleyway."

And while these messages of social awareness are good attempts, the overall tone of the album should be regarded as an average recording.

Razorblade Suitcase will not be the last anyone hears from Bush, but the group is going to have to work harder on their next release to keep their reputation on high ground.

Bush is a formidable, alternative-British band, but the group forgot repeating success does not mean repeating songs. C+

Bush

The musical bushwackers are back, bringing with them their familiar sounds in a new album, Razorblade Suitcase.

Razorblade Suitcase is filled with 13 tracks of garage-band sounds, a calmer version of the band's songs "Little Things" and "Everything Zen."

The group's first single from the album, "Swallowed," is as good as the album gets.

It's a love song in an alternative-construed way, one that mixes a catchy chorus with descriptive lyrics.

On the track, the band's lead singer, Gavin Rosedale, sings, "Hey you said you would love to try some/hey you said you would love to die some/in the middle of a world on a fishhook/you're the wave, you're the wave, you're the wave." Do not think the other tracks do not de-
