SANTA MONICA, Calif. (AP) — Dumped by Hertz and NBC, O.J. Simpson had to look elsewhere, anywhere, for money, and the journey for dollars led him to the oddest places — like a cemetery.

Among the 19 contracts Simpson signed after the killings of his ex-wife and her friend was a $1 million deal for post-verdict pictures of himself, including $100,000 for "The Cemetery Photographs," presumably taken at his ex-wife's grave.

The search did not end there, according to documents filed with the court by the plaintiffs in his civil trial. There was, for instance, the deal for O.J. Simpson birthday cards that came with an audio greeting from Simpson himself.

He also inked deals to sign thousands of trading cards, pre-paid calling cards and football helmets, both full-sized and miniature, and lent his name or image to such things as statuettes, gold medallions and a limited edition set of color lithographs.

And all this was in addition to his much-publicized deals to co-write the jailhouse tome "I Want to Tell

You" and to star in his own "O.J. Simpson: The Interview." Some money-making opportunities have yet to be finalized, witness at Simpson's civil trial. Simpson was trying to sell the day he wore the day he was accused of murder charges.

In total, plaintiffs estimated Simpson already has made more than $3 million off the publicity. Simpson to charges he slashed to death his ex-wife Nicole Brown Simpson and her friend Ronald Goldman on June 12, 1994.
