Volunteers will be repairing the first fleet of bicycles in the MSC basement on Feb. 22 at 1 p.m.

Burton said all students are welcome to come and help repair the bicycles. The success of the program depends on student involvement in the program, he said.

Students interested in helping with the program can call the Student Government office at 845-3051.

The first fleet of thirty-five to fifty bicycles will be available around March 16.

Burton said he hopes the program brings convenient transportation to the students.

"I want it (Borrow-a-Bike) to be a success," he said. "I want to help the students out."

The bill passed unanimously.

REPLANT

Loomis said to offset the 7,000 to 8,000 trees cut for the 1995 Bonfire, Replant participants planted nearly double that number last spring.

He said the number of trees planted is not necessarily the number of trees that will ultimately replace those cut down.

"Not every tree survives that is potted," Loomis said. "[Since 1990], the total survival rate has been 40 percent."

Because of a drought last summer, 1,500 potted seedlings remained from an original 10,000. Therefore, 1,000 fewer students were needed to participate this year because there were fewer trees to plant, Loomis said.

The Replant organization has tried to remedy the low survival rate. Loomis said these efforts include using larger pots, allowing the potted plants to grow for 2 or 3 years rather than just one, placing bark mulch around the seedlings and adding root stimulator to the potted plant.

Replant this year will be near Lake Somerville at an old Clayton Williams oil well that exploded in 1985, killing the surrounding vegetation. Trees planted Saturday will include saw-toothed oak, live oak, bald cypress and green ash among others, Loomis said.

"[We want to] revegetate the area and help the forest reclaim the land," Loomis said.

STUDENTS

Nickel said many of the students think A&M is only made up of football players and sports figures.

"We want to encourage academics and make them see the whole picture," she said. "That is the reason we scheduled the tour."

Nickel said she worried at first that the children might not understand the student government processes she and Dewald were teaching. But her worries were put to rest soon after she began working with the children.

"The children are amazing," she said. "They are so much more mature than I was at that age. This student council has become their life. They actually look forward to their Friday meetings."

Scott Musser, the vice president and a fourth-grader at Pebble Creek, said the student council held a canned food and toy drive for charity.

"Those were really fun," he said. "Plus we had a Realtor's Day, where we served cake and took people on tours of the school, so the realtors could tell people moving into the area about Pebble Creek."

Dewald said all the children wanted to get involved in giving back to the community.

"These kids have great hearts," she said. "They are always looking outward; they never look inward."

"When all these kids got up and presented their speeches during elections, they talked about helping other students. They talked about making Pebble Creek a better school," Dewald said. "These kids actually understand that being a good leader means being willing to help others."

Musser said he wanted to make things better for his classmates.

"I wanted to be on student council so I can help make Pebble Creek the best it could be," he said.

STRIKE

The regional jet issue has been a point in negotiations for some time. Sides agree the smaller routes are more important for American to remain competitive. They don't agree on who should fly the engine jets that have up to 70 seats.

American mechanics, flight attendants and other workers all have higher wages than their counterparts at the other airlines. A conglomerate of four small airlines funneling $1 billion in aid to American Airlines.

The union wants 3 percent pay raises each August for the next three years and a 2 percent raise on Aug. 31, 2000.

The pilots also want stock options worth 7.25 million shares at below-market cost and they want to phase out one year a lower pay and pension schedule for newly hired pilots that has been in place since 1983.

Nickel said the visit to the campus will be something the children will always remember.

"I want them to know that hard work pays off," she said. "And maybe they will remember some buzz words like 'senior bill' so they will be able to use them on it later."

Now that the student council is well on its way, Dewald said she would like to see a continuation of their "Aggie Buddy Mentors."

"I would like to see one person at a time to participate in a community service project where the student council can cooperate with A&M's bigger student government," she said.
