

REGENT

"He (Avilés) will easily be able to see the broad scope of the A&M system and bring his experience to help solve the problems," Gaston said.

Avilés said that, as a regent, he wants to ensure that Texas students have equal access to the A&M System.

"I look at it (being a regent) to provide the best education that we can give to the young people of Texas," Avilés said. "I want to find ways to ensure the youth of Texas receive the education they require."

Dr. Ray M. Bowen, A&M president, said Avilés will reinforce strengths that already exist in the Board of Regents.

"His greatest strength will be his concern for high academic quality and his concern for faculty and students," Bowen said.

Avilés said the two other new regents, Armstrong and Nye, will also provide the Board with new perspectives.

"I believe that my other two new colleagues (Armstrong and Nye) bring a wealth of background and a wealth of knowledge," Avilés said. "We're looking forward to serving the people of Texas."

Steve Walkup, a former member of the Fish Drill Team and a junior agricultural engineering major, said what makes this incident so terrible is the disappointment involved.

"If I were one of those fish, I would be tremendously disappointed because you would feel like you worked all year for nothing," Walkup said.

"You have the utmost respect for the upperclassmen. They want you to be the best you can, even if it includes a few hardships."

Foster said the Drill Team still plans performing at the regenting four exhibition semester.

Clay Lankford, the inspector general, was pointed to supervise team during this period.

"The fishes' major concern was for A&M," Foster said.
