Arizona, Kentucky ready for cat fight

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Get the VCRs ready. The pace of the NCAA title game promises to be so fast you might need to watch it in slow motion to catch it all.

Kentucky and Arizona are quick. No, they're quicker than that. The pressure won't be in trying to repeat as national champion, Kentucky's aim. And it won't be winning the crown for the first time, Arizona's goal. It will come Monday night from defenses that live to force turnovers and create easy baskets.

"Our guys like fast-paced games," Arizona coach Lute Olson said Sunday. "It's going to be like watching a tennis match, so people better do some neck exercises before they come in tomorrow night."

Both teams capitalized on their quickness to reach the title game. Kentucky is well-known for the speed it uses in a variety of defenses, which forced 26 turnovers in Saturday's 78-69 victory over Minnesota in the semifinal.

Arizona (24-9), the only non-No. 1 seed in the Final Four, made its move in the NCAA tournament with wins over top-ranked Kansas, Providence and North Carolina.

"They've got incredible quickness and speed, and they didn't beat Kansas on a fluke game," Kentucky coach Rick Pitino said of Arizona. "They beat Kansas because they were an outstanding team against an outstanding ballclub, and they've been that way throughout the tournament, and they've been that way throughout the season."

Kentucky (35-4) is one win away from becoming the first repeat champion since Duke in 1992, and Pitino would be the seventh coach to win at least two straight titles.

His team bears little resemblance to the one that beat Syracuse for the title last season, except for Ron Mercer, who had 20 points in the championship game as a freshman.

Still, Kentucky uses the pressure defense things going even if the opposition uses the same strategy.

"When teams press us we try to get it," said Kentucky senior Anthony Epps. "Me and Wayne Turner both being point guards, we have two guards to beat the press and all five guys to break it. We press each other day in practice, so we know how to handle it."

Arizona freshman point guard Mike Miller also didn't sound all that concerned about the pressure.

"They like to run. We like to run," he said. "Teams that have tried to press us have given up a couple of possessions because we have kept it every time. Their press is unbelievable, they keep coming at you because they seem to get tired."

Kentucky also is impressive that way. An off night by Mercer, Kentucky found a score, usually off a turnover or with minutes pointers — two of which were back-breakers. Minnesota took its only lead of the game when it scored in the second half.

The bottom line for this team is Johnson. They will score runs, but they will have to be able to keep a lead.

Projected Record: 94-68

Key Series: April 1-2 vs. New York Yankees; Opening Day in Seattle against the defending World Series champions. The Mariners get a chance to set the tone for the rest of the season with a two-game sweep of their cross-country rivals. Seattle felt they should have been in the post-season last year — here's their chance to prove it.

ANAHEIM ANGELS

The Angel's 1996 season was just a continuation of their 1995 collapse when they lost a 10-1/2 game division lead in the last month of the season. But they still have the core of that team who should have made the playoffs in 1995.

The outfield is one of baseball's most promising and talented. Gar-ret Anderson, Jim Edmonds and Tim Salmon are good enough to carry this team all season, but if Anaheim wants to be around in October, the rest of the team will have to step up. Dave Hollins was acquired to play third base while Gary DiSarcina will stay at shortstop and Randy Velarde will move from third to second. Darin Erstad will replace J.T. Snow at first and Jim Leyritz, the team's most important offseason acquisition, will be behind the plate. Eddie Murray will make his sixth stop in his 21-year career to be the designated hitter.

Chuck Finley and Mark Langston will return as the one-two punch in the starting rotation. Mark Gubicza and Allen Watson will be the No. 4 and No. 5 guys and with the releasing of Todd Van Poppel, Pep Harris and Dennis Springer will battle for the last spot. Troy Percival was one of the league's most dominating closers in 1996. He will headline a bullpen that doesn't have many holes. Mike Holtz, Chuck McElroy, Mike James and Jason Dickson are expected to do most of the middle-inning work.

The Angels are a team that has the talent to surprise the entire division. It will be new manager Terry Collins' job to make them believe they can do it.

Projected Record: 82-80

Key Series: Sept. 25-28 vs. Texas Rangers; Anaheim will get a chance to play spoiler for the Rangers if they can take three or four games in this season finale.

OAKLAND ATHLETICS

Oakland is in a self-proclaimed rebuilding year. This team played as well as it could have last season, finishing 78-84, but they probably won't improve this year.

Jose Canseco was the biggest off-season acquisition, not because he's still a dominating player, but because he will be reunited with fellow Bash Brother, Mark McGuire, again. Scott Brosius will start at third base and Brent Gates at second. Tony Batista, after having a nice rookie season, will move to short. Izzy Molina will get the call to catch, but the A's will surely pick up a veteran backstop to nurse the rookie along. In the outfield the A's have three good hitters — Jasonambi, Ernie Young and Genito Berroa, but Young is the only one of these three that has major league outfield skills.

Willie Anderson, Ariel Prieto and Mike Mohler are locks for their starting rotation. The rest of the staff will surface during spring training or at least they are supposed to. The bullpen is deep with solid arms, no one knows what their role will be. The three main hurlers in the rotation are probably Buddy Groom, Corsi and Billy Taylor.

No matter how bad Oakland plays this season, it will still be to watch them. They can find a way to win. They can find a way to win. They can find a way to win.

Projected Record: 75-87
