Jones sets up board to improve image

IRVING (AP) — Most NFL teams have one or two people in charge of monitoring player behavior. Dallas' wayward Cowboys will soon have a whole department.

Cowboys owner Jerry Jones, apparently tired of his team's ailing image, has launched a multi-faceted effort to improve player behavior, including an alumni advisory board and an orientation program for rookies. Jones also said future player contracts will contain character clauses.

By the time the Cowboys kick off the 1997 season, the team will have at least four managers and more than 10 employees dedicated to player behavior. There'll be department managers in the areas of security, player development and assistance, psychology and spirituality, Jones said Wednesday.

The wide-ranging plan was devised by Calvin and Janet Hill. The former Dallas running back and his wife, the parents of basketball star Grant Hill, were recently hired as team consultants.

"The fans of the Cowboys deserve this type of intense commitment to good behavior," Jones said, calling the effort a "multimillion-dollar commitment over a number of years."

Dallas' image as America's Team has taken a beating in recent years because of well-publicized collisions between Cowboys players and the law. The Cowboys also lead the league in drug-related suspensions, including recent incidents involving Michael Irvin, Leon Lett and Shante Carver.

"We have a very keen sensitivity and feeling about where we've been regarding our on- and off-the-field behavior," Jones said.

Hill, a Yale graduate who played for Dallas from 1969 to 1974, said the plan is based on drug programs he put together for the Cleveland Browns and Rand Corp.

Jones said the plan will become a model for the NFL.

"He's taken that function to the next level," said NFL spokesman Greg Aiello. "A lot of clubs have one or two people charged with player programs and player behavior, but nothing like this."

In addition to a player-behavior department, Hill suggested an advisory board of former Cowboys to help counsel players. Among the potential ex-Cowboys whom Hill mentioned were Roger Staubach, Pettis Norman and Jethro Pugh.

Clark placed on DL with injured wrist

ARLINGTON (AP) — The Texas Rangers placed first baseman Will Clark on the 15-day disabled list Thursday and purchased the contract of outfielder Mike Simms from Class AAA Oklahoma City.

The team also assigned infielder

Dave Silvestri outright to Oklahoma State University, Stephen F. Austin University, North Texas University and Texas Tech University.

The A&M team has won the conference tournament five out of the last six years and are currently No. 2 in the conference standings.

Clark

Clark's designation is retroactive to March 29, meaning he would have been activated April 13.
