she will be working on budget presentations during the summer.

"I'll be working on budget presentations for student government and student services fees to be them ready for the fall," Little said.

Paris, Williams and Little were sworn in with Childers, as were three other vice presidents.

"I use art for a creative outlet. I take ideas from my head and put them into concrete form," Lane said. "It's like a diary of pictures."

Timeekah Lane, a freshman business administration major, also entered Artfest. She submitted two acrylic paintings, one of a fish and a wine glass and another of a mural of animals and eyes.

Lane said she always has artistic ability, but she was disappointed to learn Texas A&M offered no art degree plan.

"Every person portrays artistic ability," Lane said. "It brings out everyone's creative side. It relieves stress for me and helps me to express my feelings."
