RING DANCE

Stephanie Walker, a Ring Dance volunteer and a sophomore journalism member, said students not attending the dance can come help out.

"We collect tickets, serve non-alcoholic drinks and popcorn among other things," Walker said.

Anyone interested in helping out with Ring Dance can call Walker at 847-5866 or e-mail her at wheels@cis.tamu.edu.

The dance is open to all students. Dance tickets for couples or individuals can be purchased at the MSC Box Office. Tickets are also available for the Senior Banquet, which is held before the dance at the College Station Hilton.

She said the money goes to two national grants and local programs on prenatal education and teenage mentoring.

Spies said the March of Dimes' mission is to prevent birth defects. She said they want to stress to college students the importance of a healthy lifestyle before students become pregnant.

"It's a great connection to A&M," she said. "It's important for the March of Dimes to have a presence at A&M."

Spies said the March of Dimes also is able to influence the lives of the cadets.

"A lot of them (cadets) are volunteering the March of Dimes for life," she said.

The 1996-1997 March of Dimes Ambassador child Brooke LeClair and her family dinner with the Corps on Thursday night.

Terry Lea, the E-1 public relations and chaplain and a junior psychology major, said it is encouraging for cadets to see children they are able to help. He said cadets raise money because of the money offered if a certain amount is raised, but they meet a child they help, it gives them to the Brazos a purpose.

"It (meeting the child) gives us a realization of what we are doing," Lea said. "The March of the Brazos is the largest fund-raising event for the March of Dimes."
