HOTEL

McIlhaney said the council's decision will benefit the city. "I think it is very positive," McIlhaney said. "We were very fortunate we had two winning proposals, professional managements and quality hotels."

McIlhaney said her decision was based on choosing development over redevelopment.

Barren Hobbs, general manager of the Hilton and president of the Brazos Valley Hotel/Motel Association, said the council made the right decision to let the voters decide if the city should have a new hotel and conference center.

"I think the city did the right thing," Hobbs said. Hobbs said he thinks the city should not have chosen a specific location but should have allowed the voters to decide.

Hobbs said the two proposals are both good. "They selected two quality developers," Hobbs said. "It's a win-win situation for the city."

Before voting on the hotel location, the city voted 5-

2 for a November referendum.

McIlhaney said she has confidence in the city's voters. "I believe the one thing that makes me proud of the city is that if the voters are given all of the information they will inform themselves and make the right decision," McIlhaney said.

She said the city will begin negotiations with the Pen Creek group and that a decision will most likely be made within the next two months. A new feasibility study will be conducted that is specific to the Wolf Pen Creek site. The study includes size measurements, location and a traffic study.

The voters will then know if they will be voting on the Wolf Pen Creek hotel and conference center. The city does not reach an agreement with Wolf Pen Creek until the city will begin working with Leddy for a Northside hotel and conference center.

The Wolf Pen Creek proposal includes a full-service hotel, an office building and a conference center. The proposed location is at Dartmouth Street and Holleman Drive.

The city says it will commit no more than $6 million to the project.

PROGRAMS

Several performers have been approached, but no confirmations have been made, Thomas said.

This is the first year the fall entertainment program will feature musical performers. Comedians Chris Rock, Bill Bellamy and Joe Torry have been on the bill in years past. Alpha Phi Alpha and the MSC have co-sponsored such an event for three of the last four fall semesters, Thomas said.

Thomas said Alphapalooza will demonstrate A&M's efforts to provide programs to African-Americans and other minorities.

"It does a lot for the image of Alpha Phi Alpha, the MSC and the University as a whole," Thomas said. "This is going to do a lot for [minority student] recruitment, and especially the way the Bryan community sees the University."

Whalum is scheduled to play September 12 at a concert co-sponsored by Town Hall and the MSC Black Awareness Committee. This will be Whalum's third performance at A&M.

LaSondra Carroll, BAC chair and a junior journalism major, said the Whalum concert is also part of the MSC's ongoing efforts to extend cultural awareness to students and the community.

"It's an opportunity to bridge the gap between former students and present students," she said. "Alphapalooza will be touching more on the youth."

BAC will also help sponsor "Texas Business Leaders of the '90s" on October 3, the play Camp Logan on October 15 and a pre-Kwanzaa celebration on November 11.

"One of the main goals of all the organizations [in the MSC] is to tap into the markets that have been overlooked," Carroll said. "It has been a major goal."

The Whalum performance will help commemorate the 10th anniversary of Multicultural Services.

Rodriguez will be brought to A&M by the Committee for the Awareness of Mexican-American Culture and Town Hall. CAMC representatives said Saturday that the committee, like BAC, will advertise the show to Mexican-American students as well as a cross-section of the market to try to expand awareness of Mexican-Awareness culture to all students.

RATINGS

Sponsors want to encourage production again of safe shows like Happy Days and Little House on the Prairie.

But what constitutes safe "family friendly" programs and who decides? In the early 1970s, "All in the Family" featured Carroll O'Connor as the politically incorrect Archie Bunker. It sparked a national uproar over what language and topics were appropriate for prime-time television, but the program was tame by today's standards.

Sponsors of the bills insist they would give government no control over broadcasters. "Any guidelines or programming standards the industry chose to adopt would be purely voluntary and could not be enforced by the government in any way," Brownback said.

Groups that want to clean up TV programming like the "family hour" bills.

"We wholeheartedly support the bill because... it allows the networks to do something to clean up the content of programming," said Mark Honig, executive director of the conservative Parents Television Council.
