BODY

Police said the body bore a self-inflicted gunshot wound. Local television reports said a .40-caliber handgun, the same type of weapon Cunanan was believed to have used in a cross-country killing spree, was found near the body.

More than 100 police and FBI agents descended on the large blue, two-story houseboat after a caretaker told officers he heard a gunshot inside the residence. Police set up a perimeter around the houseboat, which sits on a branch of the Intra-coastal Waterway called Indian Creek, and closed off Miami Beach's busy Collins Avenue for several blocks.

At one point during the four-hour standoff, officers in black flak jackets fired volleys of tear gas and shouted "Come out! Come out!"

Minutes later, at least six SWAT team members carrying rifles and a shield walked slowly in a line into the house. After nearly an hour inside, police announced their search had come up empty. But after a more intensive, room-by-room search, they found the body.

A source told the AP that the body was found on the second floor of the houseboat, where bedrooms are located. The source said investigators believe the shot that the caretaker heard may have been the one that killed the man.

Cunanan, a 27-year-old described by his mother as a gay gigolo, was the prime suspect in Versace's killing and four other slayings. He had managed to escape capture even though his picture has been plastered on television, newspapers, the Internet and posters proclaiming him one of the FBI's most-wanted fugitives.

David Todini, who lives near the houseboat, said he saw a man who fit Cunanan's description, wearing a bandana and carrying a backpack the night before Versace was killed.

"It looked out of place because there was no sun, there was no reason for him to have a bandana on his head," Todini said. "I said to myself, 'This guy's trying to disguise himself.'"

The owner of the houseboat is Torsten Reineck who runs a health spa catering to gays a few blocks east of the Las Vegas Strip. Reineck is not listed in Las Vegas phone directories and could not be located for comment.

According to an FBI agent who asked not to be identified, there is no sign that Cunanan ever knew Reineck.

PERRY

Perry recently announced his Republican candidacy for lieutenant governor of Texas in 1998. Sharp also announced he would run as the Democratic candidate for lieutenant governor.

Perry said he competed with Sharp several times before in running for student offices.

"Each year I ran for office with John," Perry said.

"I don't remember what exactly our titles were. We were class officers our freshman and sophomore years."

Perry graduated from Texas A&M, where he was a yell leader his junior and senior year, in 1972.

Perry said he has fond memories of his years at A&M.

"The four years I spent at Texas A&M ... will always be four of the most extraordinary years, most satisfying years and most stimulating years that I will ever spend in my life," he said.

Perry was a pilot in the U.S. Air Force from 1972 to 1977 and was discharged with the rank of captain.

That same year, Perry returned to his home in Haskell, Texas to become a partner with his father on the family ranch.

Sharp returned to the area when then-Gov. Bill Clements appointed him to the Texas Real Estate Research Centers Advisory Board in 1980.

In 1984, Perry was elected to the Texas House of Representatives.

Shortly after his second term in the Texas Legislature, Perry was elected to the Appropriations Committee.

"That got me more closely entwined with Texas A&M's business," Perry said.

Perry was elected agriculture commissioner in 1990.

SHARP

"I have never had a political race as hard and demanding as student body president at A&M," he said. "You've got the Corps, the fraternities, the non-regs and everyone else on campus to think about."

"I have never had a political race as hard and demanding as student body president at A&M."

John Sharp
State comptroller

After graduation, he was commissioned as second lieutenant in the United States Army Reserves. Four years later, Sharp received a master's degree in public administration from Southwest Texas State University while working for the Legislative Budget Board in Austin.

Sharp was elected to the Texas House of Representatives from Victoria in 1978, and he served as a state senator in 1982. He also was elected Texas railroad commissioner in 1986.

After serving in the Texas Legislature, Sharp was elected state comptroller in 1990 and was re-elected in 1994.

Ross Ramsey, campaign manager for Sharp, said it would be an honor for Texas to have Sharp as a lieutenant governor, because Sharp has a strong background in government.

Sharp said his political science degree from A&M taught him a lot about government operations. He said the political science classes he took influenced his decision to go into politics.

Gary Halter, faculty adviser of the Aggie Democrats and a professor of political science, said Sharp has been very successful in his career.

"He's a former student of mine," Halter said, "and he's done an excellent job as comptroller. He's greatly improved the agency."

Halter said Sharp always has strong campaigns in the past that will show in this election.

Sharp said being an Aggie makes him proud. He said employers hire Aggies because of the qualities that they develop at A&M.

"When kids come from other places, they come with a different perspective," Sharp said. "And with the good qualities, they also have leadership skills. Leadership training at A&M is far better than at other places."

Sharp said his office hires a lot of Aggies as interns each year because of their potential and education background.

During his term in office, Sharp created the Texas Tomorrow Fund, which is a pre-paid college tuition plan that allows families to lock in future college tuition costs at about what they would pay today. Sharp also helped start the Lone Star card, which switches from paper food stamps to computerized hand type cards that reduce fraud and abuse in the federal program.

Sharp is proposing a $485 million-a-year program to pay for college tuition, fees and books for students in Texas who maintain an "average" grade point average. Under this program, any student who is accepted to a public or private Texas college, university or junior college would be eligible to receive a tuition grant.

Sharp, 46, is married to Charlotte Han and has a son, Spencer, and a daughter, Victoria.

Swiss banks publish lists of Nazi-era account holders

LONDON (AP) — Fiona Goetz was astounded Wednesday to find her late husband's name was on a list of Nazi-era Swiss bank account holders. In New York, Greta Beer burst into tears when she discovered her father's was not.

Around the globe, people pored over the list of about 2,000 names of World War II-era depositors published Wednesday in newspapers from New York to London to Moscow.

The unprecedented step was taken by the Swiss banks — under international pressure — in an effort to finally reunite Holocaust victims or their heirs with lost fortunes. But it also elicited memories of lost families and friends — and raised as many questions as answers.

Beer, now in her 70s and living in Queens, N.Y., said she has been trying for decades to obtain money she says her father, Seigfried Deligdisch, a Jewish textile mill owner in what is now Ukraine, deposited in a Swiss bank in the 1930s.

"They have expunged it. They have done away with it. They have crossed it out," she said, her eyes welling with tears after failing to find his name on the list. "I don't believe it."

In a trembling voice, Beer recounted how her father, who did business around Europe and Egypt, would come home to his family afterward. "Invariably, he would tell us he had deposited the money in Switzerland," she said.

Her father died of natural causes in 1941. His family fled Europe and the war soon afterward, after all its property was confiscated.

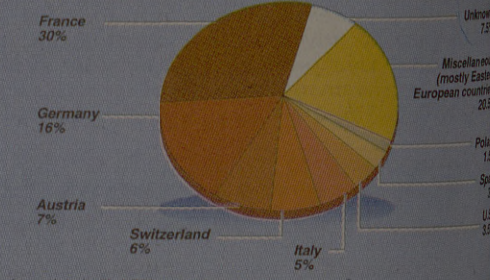

In country after country, the list generated surprise, confusion — and anger that the banks had not done more sooner to find the depositors.

Among those on the list were Andre Moulhierac and his widow, Madeleine, 86, who has lived at the same address in Nice, France, since 1936 — and whose family-owned pharmacy has been in the same location for a half-century.

Nazi gold claimants

Swiss banks published the names of World War II-era depositors, and said they have found $15 million more that may have belonged to Holocaust victims.

Percentages by countries of residence of the 1,872 names of Swiss bank account holders that were opened by non-Swiss before May 9, 1945

*associated with 1,756 separate accounts (including joint accounts)

victims and nonvictims of the Holocaust

Some facts about the list...
• The total current value of these accounts is 60.2 million Swiss Francs (approximately 42 million U.S. dollars).
• Approximately 10% of the accounts comprise 90% of the total value. Two-thirds of accounts have a value of 5,000 Swiss Francs (approximately 3,500 U.S. dollars) or less.

Some questions about the list...
• How do you prove that you are a rightful owner of a dormant account or that you have any information on locating a rightful owner?
Fill out the Claim Form and return it no later than January 23, 1998. Send copies of any supporting evidence that is available. For verification, include a copy of your passport, identification card or similar form of official photo-identification.
• How much is the money worth now?
A national body will be set up to figure out how much the money has appreciated and how much interest has been earned.
• Claim forms can be obtained through the website at http://www.dormantaccounts.com or through Dormant Accounts Companies in the claimants' country of residence.

"What's shocking is that the pharmacy has been the same place for 51 years. The name hasn't changed. Couldn't they have sent a letter sooner?" asked son, Henri Moulhierac.

"It's scandalous... I am ready to make a fuss. We write to the bank," said Moulhierac, whose father died 15 years ago.

Jewell sues paper for libel

NEW YORK (AP) — Richard Jewell sued the New York Post for $1 million Wednesday, saying he was libeled and defamed by the newspaper's "fictionalized" coverage of him while he was a suspect in the Olympic Park bombing.

The federal lawsuit cites a series of articles, headlines, photographs and editorial cartoons that appeared in the newspaper in the days after The Atlanta Journal-Constitution broke the story that Jewell was a suspect.

"In essence, the New York Post literally created an individual, fictionalized a person and called him Richard Jewell," his lawyer, Wood, said Wednesday.

A spokesman for the Post, Smith, declined to comment, saying no one at the paper had seen Jewell.
