WINE

The stomped grapes are not actually used, as Messina Hof implements their modern wine-making technology, but the process gives visitors a sense of wine-making in the Old World.

The stomping is followed by a wine tasting and a palate-pleasing lunch in Messina Hof's Trattoria restaurant. Guests may then sample epicurean delights and the vineyards' specialties in a wine and food-pairing seminar. The day's festivities come to an end with a romantic evening concert in the rose garden.

"A blanket, some cheese and fine wine under the stars — this is the good life," Paul Bonarrigo said.

The Harvest Weekends will continue through August 24.

Lost Prophets debut breaks out of pop mold

The Lost Prophets
Circus
Independent label
★★★ (out of five)

BY RHONDA REINHART
THE BATTALION

The great thing about young bands with debut albums is that they have nothing to lose. The Lost Prophets' first album and independent release, Circus, is a refreshing break from the over-played and over-marketed sounds usually heard on FM radio. This band is still playing music just for the sake of playing music.

The Lost Prophets produced Circus completely on its own, and the band's self-governance is evident in the music. The group's sound is still pure, still untouched by the hands of a record company marketing department, and listeners should enjoy it while they still can.

Although some of the lyrics are a little immature, the music is intense, and the harmonies are tight. For example, while lead singer David Gonzales croons about wanting to "stay right here in my room and watch cartoons" in "Better Get Along," the rest of the group is creating music with the mature sound of a band that has been playing together for many years.

The tempo changes are controlled, the melodies are catchy and Gonzales has a fresh vocal full of energy and emotion.

Keyboardist Michael Bishop describes The Lost Prophets music as "a cross between pop and rock," and that is probably the most appropriate way to classify the band's style.

While many of the songs on the album are undoubtedly pop tunes, The Lost Prophets has also thrown in a few tracks that break the pop mold. "Struck With a Feeling" has a loud rock feel, and it is definitely the rowdiest song on the album. There is also a beautifully-written ballad called "Midnight Lullaby."

The most remarkable aspect of Circus is the quarter's ability to produce a 12-track album that does not sound like a chain of similar-sounding songs. This is a problem that plagues many young bands, but The Lost Prophets has managed to evade the sound-alike syndrome and maintain an eclectic quality not easily reproduced.

Circus is a nice blend in many ways than one. The fine mix of voices and choice of instrumentation create a fresh-sounding album that should make The Lost Prophets a band to watch.
