Di, Mother Theresa may be gone, but Marilyn is forever

It is a dark time for the rebellion. Two of our most sacred and radiant female role models, Princess Diana and Mother Theresa, caught the last train for the coast this past week. With every breath we take, every move we make, every leaf we rake, we'll indeed be missing them.

As the world aches in the wake of the wakes, I offer to the world my own personal list of goddesses to get us through this valley of the shadow of death.

Barbara Eden was one of my first heroes, but I honestly admired her more as the evil, raven-haired Jeannie about a million times more — Who didn't?

My one time Wonder Woman, Lynda Carter, now only wonders when her Clear Vision checks will come in.

Then there's Lady Elaine Fairchild from Mr. Rogers Neighborhood, who lived in the neighborhood of make believe and could turn the world upside down with her "boomerang toomerang."

Unfortunately, I recently learned she now heads up a militant lesbian ninja death squad. I think we all saw that one coming.

Of course I always get disapproving looks when I confess loyalty to my muse, Martha Stewart. Martha even sent me an autographed glossy.

"You have a serious fantasy mother obsession disorder," my close friend always says. She's just jealous. Guess I better not show her my autographed picture of Vicki Lawrence from "Mama's Family," either.

I still have Xena, who is a warrior and a princess, much like Ma Theresa and Princess Di cloistered together like sausage into a tight leather bustier. However, I don't think that this lifetime will ever canonize anyone with a porno-queen name like Lucy Lawless.

That's the end of my hope rope. My last drop of world-healing metaphysical Kool-Aid. That is, until I happened to pick up Parade magazine in last Sunday's paper.

That's when she first appeared to me, gentle reader.

She embodies beauty, strength, wit and charm, much like that sassy Dixie Carter. She is funny, intelligent, gentle, caring and has one killer set of hemispheres inside her skull.

Her name is Marilyn vos Savant, and according to the Guinness Book of World Records she is the smartest living being to ever traipse below the canopy of heaven.

With all her intelligence, intelligence that could easily overthrow all the governments of the world, she has instead chosen to humbly serve humankind through the wisdom of her weekly column, "Ask Marilyn" — a noble vocation, I must concur.

She's every Spice Girl rolled into one smarmy suit, with "girl power" to spare. She's no sex kitten — she's a lioness. There's only one thing the Spice Girls have that Marilyn doesn't, and that's a major motion picture deal.

The time is nigh for Ask Marilyn: The Movie. The American public demands cinematic cerebral cereal to properly nourish the collective cultural mind.

Look at the way audiences gave a resounding "No!" to Jurassic Park: The Lost World. Mothers and fathers left Batman and Robin in droves. Boys and girls all across the land turned up their noses to George of the Jungle. Oh, well, maybe Hollywood doesn't deserve Marilyn just yet.

This means, of course, that Marilyn will just have to crawl away into the living rooms of the good people of America by way of a TV movie! It's a land where stars as faded as Markie Post, Judith Light and Johnny Galecki can shine bright for two precious Sears-sponsored hours.

The movie will begin with Marilyn's parents, perhaps even at the moment when the archangel visits Marilyn's mother. We'll see the trials and tribulations of the young genius, in details unseen since Gary Cole man's portrayal of The Kid with the 200 IQ.

The climax will come as Marilyn is rocketed into space to fix the Mir space station, along with special guest star Don Knotts.

With the debut of Marilyn's movie, the world will regain hope for a bright tomorrow. When it seems full of questions with little hope for answers, rest easy knowing that you can always "Ask Marilyn."
