CROWLEY

"Throughout the years we've started taking those wins for granted," Crowley said. "When we walk on the field, we were expected to beat people. We were expected to win. That kind of took us down the wrong direction from the stand point of just going out there and taking over the game. "I think this year we're getting some of that back. We're going out taking the game from people and not just going out there expecting to win." Johnson said the team will be better off if heeds the advice of Crowley and the other veterans. "People like he and the fifth-year seniors on our football team are a very, very valuable resource for the fact they've been here through the whole process of being on top and dropping off," Johnson said. "Those are the guys that know what it's all about." And once you've tasted the fruits of victory, you never want to go without. "When I leave, I want A&M to be the program it was when I was here," Crowley said. "I don't want to be the guy they look at and say, 'well this is one of the guys that was here when A&M was on its downfall.' I want to be known as one of the guys that brought the program back." Johnson said he agrees. "Crowley has one shot to make his statement as a full time player and that's this season."
