► Letter regarding The Color of Fear

Dear Aggies,
 Tonight in Rudder Theater at 6 p.m. MSC Programs will be showing the film, The Color of Fear. This film is the real account of eight men from various ethnic backgrounds who are placed in a cabin together for three days. These men examine the effects that racism has had on each of them as they listen to each other's experiences. This is a very powerful, challenging film that has been used by companies such as AT&T, Levi's and Hewlett Packard to teach their employees.

You may be asking yourself, "Why should I go to this film?" The simple answer is that everyone should go to this film. There is something that each of us can learn from watching The Color of Fear. It is especially relevant to Aggies in the post-Hopwood environment where the diversity of this great university is in danger of declining. We firmly believe that if Texas A&M is to maintain its status as a world class university we need to move toward a more diverse student body.

We urge you all to attend the program this evening. It promises to be a special event on the Texas A&M campus and a special event for those who attend. We hope to see you there.

 Student Body President

"We're trying to do something that will help everyone understand each other," she said. Ewing said she hopes the program will remedy some recent events at A&M.

"The Hopwood decision and the ad that the MSC ran this summer really affected people," said Desiree Ewing, VICE PRESIDENT, BAC

SPIRIT

Jeremiah Williams, Student Government vice president of student relations and a senior agricultural economics major, said student organizations can sponsor one of the 72 trees on Main Drive for $100 and will have their symbol on the tree.

"I really hope that as many student organizations as possible will support the University and the students by contributing to the Winter Spirit of Aggieland," Williams said. "We have had support from student organizations and Aggie Mom's Clubs, but we hope for even more student involvement."

Williams, who co-authored the Senate bill establishing the committee, said the project is a way for A&M to better interact with the community.

"This is something we can share with the Brazos Valley, and we can show what A&M has to offer," he said. "The Winter Spirit of Aggieland committee is a way that students can give back to the community and the people of the community."

Robert Bisor, assistant vice president for administration, said the project will help bring a sense of community to the two cities.

"There really isn't a center between Bryan-College Station, so A&M will be the focal point that ties these two towns together," he said. "This will attract new donors and more visitors to Bryan-College Station Holiday on the Brazos."

Smith said Fred Brown, the top donor and a Bryan-College Station business owner, will turn on the lights of the main tree at the lighting ceremony Dec. 1.

Curtis Childers, student body president, and a senior agricultural development major, co-authored the bill. He said Winter Spirit of Aggieland will bring warmth to students around winter break.

"We need to get Aggies involved in winter spirit," he said. "To many it manifests itself as religious, but this does not involve religious ceremony or worship. The purpose is to bring Aggies together."

BUSH

Archives of papers also may be viewed on computers located in the Archives section of the Library.

After former President Richard Nixon's funeral, Bush said he wishes for he and Barbara to be buried under a tree-shaded area on the large complex. The remains of their daughter, Robin Bush, who died in 1953 of leukemia, will be placed near the site. Millie, the Bush's dog, died last month and is expected to be buried at the site.
