Senate hears finance proposals

By BRANDYE BROWN
Staff writer

The Student Senate referred to committee the Student Government Association Budgetary Process Bill and the Election Regulations Revision Bill Wednesday night.

Amy Magee, Rules and Regulations chair and a senior psychology major, said the budgetary process bill laid out the method used in the Senate this year to appropriate spending by Student Government. "The process for allocation worked very well this year," she said. "Previously, there was no set budget policy, and often each president handled it very differently. This bill makes sure that there is an appropriate appeals process for committees who feel money should be allocated differently."

The Election Regulations Revisions Bill would ban the use of copyrighted symbols for campaign material to avoid legal entanglements by student candidates.

Also, the Senate was given the financial position of the Winter Spirit of AggieLand Committee established last year.

Kaycie Swain, an off-campus senator and a junior political science major, said Winter Spirit of AggieLand needs the support of student organizations to meet its proposed budget.

"Winter Spirit of AggieLand was voted in unanimously by the Senate," she said. "It couldn't have begun without Senate, and it can't continue without Senate's support."

The committee has $5,000 in promised donations, but it needs at least $15,000 to decorate New Main Drive, Swain said.

Alice Gonzalez, speaker of the Senate and a junior agricultural development major, said student organizations can buy a tree for $100.

The organization will be with a wooden box at the tree with the name of the donor.

Gonzalez said the Senate tree in support of the committee.

Curtis Childers, student president and a senior agricultural development major, said students want to paint campus water tower in Aggie colors to show Aggie pride.

"It is something that when they approach campus blue tower," he said. "Some students have expressed a see it painted maroon or white."
