Baby Jessica's family keeps low profile 10 years after rescue from water well

MIDLAND (AP) — Ten years ago this week, little Jessica McClure was rescued from an abandoned well in a drama that brought out some of the best and the worst in human nature.

Today, she is an 11-year-old who makes A's and B's at school, plays the piano and French horn and whizzes through her neighborhood on skates. The sixth-grader is said to have no memory at all of the 58-hour ordeal.

"More than anything, I want her to have a normal childhood," said Cissy Porter, who was 18 when her daughter plunged down the 22-foot hole. "We want everyone to know that she's fine, that she's a healthy, active, loving girl. But we don't want people recognizing her everywhere she goes."

The girl's divorced parents, Porter and Chip McClure, seem eager to let the anniversary pass quietly, granting just one interview, to Ladies Home Journal. Shunning attention, too, are many of the rescuers in this oilfield city who have been linked ever since to the wide-eyed toddler.

Jessica told the magazine she likes Beanie Babies and animals, and has nine dogs and cats. She's bored by talk of the incident, which claimed her right little toe and left some minor scars from skin grafts.

"I'm proud of them," she said of the scars. "I have them because I survived."

The nightmares that plagued her early childhood are long gone.

"She doesn't remember any of it," said Midland police Sgt. Andy Glasscock, who was a fixture at the scene. "About the only thing she remembers is what people tell her and what she sees on the news."

A poll taken by The Pew Research Center for the People and the Press measuring coverage of Princess Diana's death found that in the last decade, only Jessica's rescue rivaled the Paris car accident in worldwide attention. Not everyone understands the fuss.

"This was just a one-child disaster," said former Midland Fire Chief James Roberts. "As we speak, somewhere in the United States an 18-month-old baby is in trouble, and the fire department is on the scene trying to save her life."

Ten years ago, Chip and Cissy McClure and her sister, McClure left Jessica in the yard. "I know what happened upon an 8-inch hole. I know she was innocently touched off a global event."

Rescue crews and citizen volunteers dug a shaft parallel to the one that trapped Jessica. A layer of super-hard rock complicated the operation.

"I don't think I ever drilled through anything harder than that," said driller Charles Boler. "I could hear her crying as we got closer. They kept me going because I had a 2-year-old son at the time and I could identify with the family."

On Oct. 16, 1987, paramedics Steve and Robert O'Donnell wriggled into the sageway, slathered a frightened Jessica in leum jelly and slid her out into the bright search lights.

Afterward, sympathetic strangers around the world who had watched Jessica's rescue inundated her with teddy bears, home gifts, cards and cash.

The money, estimated at $1 million or more, sits in a trust fund waiting for her to turn 21. Her family has asked that photos not show her face because they fear she will be kidnapped.
