WOMEN
 "Don't think of us as little women who run home crying if we hear a bad word," Charba said. "We don't get our feelings hurt."
 Estimating that 35 percent of the participants at cut are female, Charba said a new tradition is being established at A&M. More women realize fire is part of the school spirit and want to be a part of the tradition. "Bonfire is the forbidden," Charba said. "Bonfire girls are defying types by developing new traditions. The mud is good for the school."

PEOPLE in the new

Warning gone for 'Ellen' episode
 NEW YORK (AP) — Weekly "Ellen" update: No parental advisory this time. After star Ellen DeGeneres raised a stink about ABC's decision to warn viewers about "adult content" in last week's episode, this week's show has no such warning. There's no flip-flop, network spokesperson Kevin Brockman said Tuesday. Parental advisories are determined on a case-by-case basis and it wasn't needed for this week's show, which features DeGeneres on the "gay yellow pages," he said. ABC is taking a wait-and-see attitude about a planned episode has Ellen and a new girlfriend moving into a bedroom.

Anniversary for historical moment
 EDWARDS AIR FORCE BASE (AP) — He's still got the right stuff. Chuck Yeager, the test pilot who first broke the sound barrier through again Tuesday on the anniversary of his historic flight. Piloting an F-15 jet fighter, the 70-year-old Yeager sent a sonic thundering across the Mojave desert during ceremonies to commemorate the first supersonic flight.
