SPEECH

I say to you today, my friends, that in spite of the difficulties and frustrations of the moment, we have a dream. It is a dream rooted in the American tradition. I have a dream that one day this nation will rise up and take the true meaning of its creed: "These truths to be self-evident, all men are created equal." I have a dream that one day the red hills of Georgia will be swarmed by slaves and their masters together at a table of brotherhood. I have a dream that even the state of Mississippi, a desert state, sweltering with the heat of injustice, will be transformed into a garden of freedom and justice.
