Clinton, Pope John Paul II among Nobel nominees

OSLO, Norway (AP)—The famous and the anonymous — from President Clinton to the children of Colombia — are among a record 130 nominees for this year's Nobel Peace Prize.

The Oslo-based Nobel Peace Prize committee has received nominations for 100 individuals and 30 organizations, committee secretary Geir Lundestad said Tuesday.

That is higher than last year's previous record of 129, "and will probably end up even higher," Lundestad said. The committee is still receiving nominations postmarked by the Feb. 1 deadline, and is likely to add its own candidates when it meets on March 3. This year's prize, worth about $1 million, will be announced in mid-October.

The committee, which works in deep secrecy through its five or six meetings a year, refuses to reveal the names of candidates, partly to protect some of them from persecutation at home. However, those making the nominations often announce their candidates.

This year's known nominations include Clinton for efforts to protect world peace and promote democracy, former President Carter for wide-ranging peace efforts and Richard Holbrooke, the U.S. official who brokered the 1995 accord that brought an end to Bosnia's fighting.

Pope John Paul II was nominated as a global symbol of peace, Sister Helen Prejean, the author of Dead Man Walking, for her campaign against the death penalty and Mexico's bishop of San Cristobel de las Casas, Samuel Ruiz Garcia, for his campaign on behalf of his country's Chiapas Indians.

Other known nominees include Chinese pro-democracy activists Wei Jingsheng and Salvation Army, the group Doctors without Borders, and Kurdish lawmaker jailed in Turkey.

In an unusual children of Colombia by Jose Ramos Horta, 1996 Peace Prize winner Bishop Carlos Filipe, their resistance to the partition of their nation, reason for the children was not immediately clear.

Lundestad, the committee secretary, welcomed a number of nominees from Asia, Latin America and Africa. In the 1960s, the Nobel generally went to Americans, most of

Pope, Yeltsin meet at Vatican

"Extremely cordial" talks fail to produce papal visit to Russia

VATICAN CITY (AP) — Pope John Paul II and Russian President Boris Yeltsin held long, warm talks Tuesday that fell short of arranging a papal visit or a meeting with the head of the Russian Orthodox Church.

The talks in John Paul's private library lasted 50 minutes, and the Vatican described them as "extremely cordial."

But Yeltsin's spokesperson, Sergei Yastrzhembsky, said the two men did not even discuss a visit by the much-traveled pope to Russia or a first-ever meeting with the Russian Orthodox patriarch, which the Vatican has been trying to set up.

The pope still has a standing invitation to Moscow, first issued by Mikhail Gorbachev in 1989, papal spokesperson Joaquin Navarro-Valls said after the talks.

Such a visit would be unlikely anytime soon because of differences between the Vatican and the Russian Orthodox Church. While restrictions on religion were lifted with the fall of communism, that opened Russia to what Orthodox leaders call overzealous missionary work by Catholics.

"John Paul II was extremely satisfied with this meeting."

The pope pleaded with Yeltsin to block passage of Russia's religion law, signed in September. The law enshrined Orthodoxy as the leading faith while giving the rights of other churches.

Yeltsin's spokesman said the Russian leader talked with the pope about law and the circumstances of Catholicism in Russia.

"John Paul II was satisfied with this meeting," Yastrzhembsky said.

The Vatican said the pope praised "the contribution of the Russian people toward an ever more harmonious and united Europe."

The foreign minister and the Holy See also discussed international crises, Iraq, during meetings in Rome.

The pope and Yeltsin both have been applauded during a photo session after the meeting.
