Dr. Don Hellriegel, executive associate dean of the college, says that technology is the main reason for proposing the equipment access fee.

much more skilled in the use and application of computer-based application programs," he said.

The College of Business is proposing a $3 per credit hour fee for classes offered by the college. "The information technology revolution has not been a cost saver," he said.

the fourth floor of Wehner and improvement of software in the computer lab on the second floor of Wehner.

Under the proposal, graduate and undergraduate students in the College of Business would pay access fees. The Board of Regents is scheduled to meet March 26-27 in College Station.

CORPS

In the past, sophomores showed up at the beginning of school and were told of the daunting task ahead of them. Training freshman is much more difficult than one might think." Feather said the training is beneficial for older cadets.

"They (instructors) often say that they learn as much or more than the Fish do," Feather said. "I feel that the benefits of this program will be very discernible within the next three to four years. This year's freshman retention rate is much better than last year's and the training from last year may be a factor."
