

BULWORTH the soundtrack
Dr. Dre, LL Cool J, Ice Cube and many more produce solid beats, usual lyrics on soundtrack

Parental advisory suggested. Nuff said? Other than the explicit content of some of the tracks on the Bulworth Soundtrack album, the true artistic talent resides in the variety of beats and rhythms individuals should be able to bob their heads to. From the hard sounds of Dr. Dre and LL Cool J's pairing on "Boom" to the more hip-hoppy rapblings of Pras Michel with Ol' Dirty Bastard on "Ghetto Superstar," this compilation of music offers diversity in its artists, but stale sounds in lyrics.

One notable song that stands out from the rest of the recycled tracks is "Holiday/12 Scanner" by Witchdoctor.

rapid speed. And although the lyrics sound a bit Voodooish, they start to repeat a bit much with, "Everyday is a holiday / Holiday / Another muthaf---ing holiday." On the other hand, "Bitches are Hustlers Too" stands out, but only because the title and lyrics deal with women taking men for their money and prominent status in society. D-Fyne raps, "Bitches are hustlers, too / I thought you knew / I thought you knew." These are the lyrics that superstars are made of. Overall, the Bulworth Soundtrack takes old lyrics and puts them to some beats that may sound the same, but still offers background music good enough to drive and tap the feet to. Don't rush out to the stores for this one.

Rick Trevino in College Station on May 2

By RHONDA REINHART
Staff writer

Aggie Rick Trevino is returning to College Station on Saturday May 2 to perform at Brazos Bash Celebrates Tradition to be held at Reed Arena. The 25-year-old country singer's latest album, Earning As You Go, includes chart-topping hits such as "I Only Get This Way With You" and the title track. And if Trevino's previous success is any indication of the future, this album is headed for the top of the charts. Trevino made his first mark on the country music scene in 1994 with his self-titled debut album. The album went gold and produced the number one hit "She Can't Say I Didn't Cry." A second album, Looking For The Light, soon followed and went gold as well. All three of Trevino's albums have been recorded in Spanish, and he has become the first country artist in decades to build a significant multi-ethnic following.

A native of Austin, Trevino was a student at Texas A&M when he was signed by Columbia Records. And it seems that his school spirit lives on. Country music video fans can even catch a glimpse of Trevino wearing an Aggie cap in his "Bobbie Ann Mason" video. Joining Trevino for Brazos Bash are rising country stars The Lynns. Daughters of country goddess Loretta Lynn, the twins Peggy and Patsy, come from a long line of country music stardom; Crystal Gayle is their aunt, and Patty Loveless is their cousin. General admission tickets for Brazos Bash are $12, and all proceeds from the concert will benefit St. Joseph Regional Health Center. Concert-goers also will be treated to a traditions show featuring the Aggie Wranglers, the Singing Cadets, the Texas A&M Symphonic Band and a laser light production. Tickets are available through Ticket Master, Rother's Bookstores, Marooned Records, Double-Quick Food Stores and KBMA La Fabulosa.

Girls are OK I guess, but it's a free country and nobody should be forced to like them.
